THE MARRIAGE PRICE

Helen Tremaine belongs to a rich, horsey, fast set. She is practically engaged to Kenneth Gordon, a young idler. Frederick Lawton, a wealthy Westerner and a friend of Helen's father, long to marry her, but she never gives him the slightest encouragement. Mr. Tremaine fails. He is away on a business trip to Chicago when his daughter receives the news of his suicide and learns that she is penniless.

Evie Hitchins and her brother, Archie Van Orden, a married flirt, come to offer sympathy. Van Orden finding himself alone with Helen, asks her to let him take care of her. He is rich and she is very beautiful. Helen is furious at the insult. Van Orden seizes her and tries to kiss her. She is struggling in his arms when Frederick Lawton enters. Lawton knocks him down the stairs. Van Orden angrily decides to ruin the Westerner in the market.

Meanwhile Lawton has asked Helen to marry him and she has refused. Kenneth tells Helen that he would marry her himself if only Wall St. hadn't cleaned him out the week before. When he advises her to marry Lawton for his wealth, she proudly replies that she will try to take care of herself.

On account of his bad luck, Kenneth seeks a job in Lawton's office. The latter engages him to look after his Chicago interests. Kenneth meets Van Orden at the Club and tells him the good news. Van Orden now sees his opportunity to get even with Lawton. He bribes Kenneth to watch for any stray tips which may facilitate their putting one over on the Westerner in the market.

Helen falls miserably in her attempt to earn a living. Several months later find her in the Martha Washington Hotel reduced to her last dime. She is weak and terribly depressed from lack of food. Lawton overhears Kenneth telephoning to Helen to meet him at the Regis, and deciding to save her from that gentleman, he meets Helen instead. They dine together and he asks her to marry him. She accepts and he takes her to his spinster sister, Amelia. On the afternoon they are to be married, he

MARTINS LOOK FOR THEIR SUMMER HOME

Say Mr. Handy Boy—was it the model of the martins' home you were waiting to see before starting that job of bird house building. This is it, so get busy today. It's house hunting time for birdland now. There is one feature which is important to this structure? That is the landing perch in front of the door. You know birds like to rest a moment after a long flight—before entering their house.
