Remarkable Mexican Bird.
A remarkable bird found in Mexico is the bee-martin, which has a trick of ruffling up the feathers on top of its head into the exact semblance of a beautiful flower; when a bee comes along to sip honey from the supposed flower it is snapped up by the bird.

LOCAL BOY SCOUTS TO PLAY "TAG" NEXT TUESDAY

tures are made under the supervision of the executive council, composed of a dozen or so business and professional men of the town.

The boys on tag day will be acting under the supervision of their superior officers and if you escape them you will have to go some. If you have no money—your note or subscription on the regular form card will be accepted. Persons who are already members of the association will not be expected to sign cards, but may contribute such currency or silver as might be otherwise wasted in the city. The local council believes that the scout work is of great benefit to the town, and that money used for the work is one of the best investments for the youth which can now be availed of. The motto of the scouts is "Be Prepared" and we advise you to make this your watch word for Tuesday. All the scouts are requested to meet in the gymnasium Monday evening for final instructions.

The scouts further plan to celebrate the week by planting a memorial tree in memory of their first scout and executive officer, Theodore Roosevelt. It is expected that the tree will be planted at some suitable location, on Thursday evening, with appropriate exercises.

Last Sunday's Tribune contained the following editorial:
"Boy Scouts Week"

"There are in round numbers about 10,000,000 American boys between the ages of 12 and 21. Fewer than one-third of these belong to the Boy Scouts of America. Most of them should belong; for which reason there will be a great campaign in behalf of the movement in the week of June 8th.

"The boy demonstrated throughout the war that there is a place for him outside the playground if he is willing to accept it. He sold $275,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds in the first four campaigns; more than $50,000,000 in war stamps; performed valuable duty in messenger service and other activities where a notion of military precision and discipline was highly desirable. He performed some worthy act each day; and now he presents the slogan: 'The war is over, but our work is not.'

"The Boy Scout movement is indicative of a desire to emerge up on the field of great things; to understand how men live and work; to prepare for the problems they must undertake later in life. They are attacking the complexities of human existence before the conflict appears, not waiting until it is inevitable. Throughout the Boy Scout idea there is the snap of preparedness and it should be urged and supported.

"The boys are eager for financial support, but most of all for pledges of continued and systematic cooperation. They want 'big fellows' to look them over and get behind them. So if all the 'big fellows' in America are long in wisdom they will lend a hand."

Boy Scouts of the United States by contributions of two cents each purchased the wreaths which President Wilson laid today on the graves of American dead in the military cemetery at Suresnes, near Paris. The wreaths were dedicated to the memory of all American soldiers who fell in defense of the cause of democracy.

Arrangements for the placing of the wreaths were made through the White House by Colin H. Livingston, president of the Boy Scouts of America, who made public the following cablegram sent to the president stating the object of the wreath:
"Profoundly touched and inspired by the supreme sacrifice of their brothers and fathers on the battlefields of France in giving up their lives freely to save our homes, our liberties and our civilization, the Boy Scouts of America ask you as their honorary president and as president of the United States to have placed for them on Decoration Day upon those sacred burial grounds of France wreaths of flowers as tributes to the glorious memory of our noble dead."

Here is the other method suggested by the United States Tire Company: Put the car in low, and if you cannot feed the gas with your foot evenly, so that the wheel will revolve slowly, put your emergency brake on. Do not put it on so that the wheels will not revolve at all, but tightly enough to keep them from revolving rapidly. With the wheels turning slowly, the maximum pull is delivered to them by having the car in low gear, and so long as they turn slowly they can get the benefit of the tremendous power.

It is not always wise to fill the hole with stones or bricks, for their rough edges are hard on tires. Small branches of trees are better, as they offer much better tractive space. Should this method fail, quite often a slight push that would not much more than move a baby buggy will furnish just the added amount of power necessary to get the car going.

To Remove Paint.
Paint stains that are not fresh and yet have not entirely hardened can be softened by moistening them with ammonia and sprinkling them with a little turpentine. Roll the fabric up for fifteen or twenty minutes or soak it for several hours if necessary and then wash it with warm water and soap and hang it out in the air to remove the turpentine odor.

"FOR BETTER, FOR WORSE"

Sylvia Norcross, a young woman of wealth and high social position, and intensely patriotic, is interested in war work, to the performance of which she devotes most of her time. She is loved by two men, Dr. Edward Meade, a specialist in the treatment of children's diseases, and Richard Burton, a young architect. Sylvia likes them both, and she is quite unable to choose between them. The rivals are close friends, and it is understood that their friendship will endure, no matter what choice Sylvia may make.

A new children's hospital, the plans of which are prepared by Burton is to be erected and Dr. Meade is offered the position of director. Believe it his duty to go to France as a surgeon, he steadily refuses, until he is finally convinced that his talents can be employed to far greater advantage in the hospital. He finally accepts the position, refuses a commission in the United States Army, and when Sylvia hears of his course she attributes it to his cowardice and hints that his real purpose is to remain at home while Burton, his rival who has enlisted meanwhile fights at the front, and thus gain an advantage over his rival.

While Meade is trying to convince her of his loftiness of purpose in remaining at home, Burton wearing his uniform is announced. Sylvia overcomes by patriotic fervor, convinces herself that she loves Burton, and when he asks her to marry him, before he sails to France, she readily consents. They are wedded the next day, and Meade is the only man not in uniform present. This adds to his unhappiness, for none seems to understand his position. Immediately after the nuptials, Burton leaves his bride and goes to France.

Believing Burton dead, Sylvia gladly accepts Meade's offer of marriage, and they invite some friends to a party at which their engagement is to be formally announced. Having been informed by a woman friend that Sylvia thinks only of him, Burton hurries to her home and arrives there just as the engagement is to be announced. Sylvia and Meade stand aghast when he enters, and they make it appear that the party has been called to welcome him home. Burton soon discovers the real state of affairs and he refuses to wreck the happiness her union with Meade would assure her.

Meade and Sylvia announce that they have given up all hope of being married but Burton assures them that his course is the only logical solution of the difficulty. He now realizes that he loves another woman madly.

SUGGESTIONS FOR MOTORIST WHO'S "STUCK IN MUD"

A resourceful motorist whose car has been stuck in the mud does not always have to fall back on a pair of mules to get free. For such an emergency the United States Tire Company offers some suggestions that have proved valuable.

The first calls for having stored away somewhere in the car a stack of old newspapers. When the car gets stuck and the wheels refuse to take hold, feed in some of the old newspapers between the tires and the mud. Usually only a few will have to be worked in before the wheels will begin to grip and the car start forward. This method of handling a difficult situation is so simple and so uniformly successful, that every motorist should know of it and carry a pile of old newspapers, unless he is equipped with some other apparatus for such a contingency.

Here is the other method suggested by the United States Tire Company: Put the car in low, and if you cannot feed the gas with your foot evenly, so that the wheel will revolve slowly, put your emergency brake on. Do not put it on so that the wheels will not revolve at all, but tightly enough to keep them from revolving rapidly. With the wheels turning slowly, the maximum pull is delivered to them by having the car in low gear, and so long as they turn slowly they can get the benefit of the tremendous power.

It is not always wise to fill the hole with stones or bricks, for their rough edges are hard on tires. Small branches of trees are better, as they offer much better tractive space. Should this method fail, quite often a slight push that would not much more than move a baby buggy will furnish just the added amount of power necessary to get the car going.
