COMMUNITY IN A FINAL TRIBUTE TO JOHN BRYAN

American Legion, Co. H and Residents Gathered for Memorial Service Sunday.

A memorial service for John V. Bryan, Jr. was held last Sunday afternoon in depot park. The entire community joined in this final tribute to a Downers Grove boy hero who gave up his life on the altar of humanity.

Co. H. I. R. M. and ex-service men lent the needed military touch to the occasion. A detail of marines, Stanley Baron, Theodore Erickson and Willard Gallup acted as color guard and drew Old Glory to the top of the flag pole before lowering its folds to half mast. Then as taps sounded the service flag with its new star of gold fluttered on the breeze.

Rev. T. J. Owens, minister of the Congregational Church, opened the program with the invocation. He was followed by Paul Bentley, temporary secretary of the American Legion who read the obituary and the resolutions drawn up by the Community Welfare League.

Rev. Hugh M. MacWhorter, pastor of S. Andrews Episcopal Church read the sermon. He gave a very eloquent talk bringing to the family and to all those that mourn, a message of solace.

Following Rev. MacWhorter, Rev. Father Eneas B. Goodwin of St. Joseph's Church, who was personally acquainted with John Bryan spoke a few words and gave the benediction.

During the services members of S. Andrews' choir sang appropriate music. Their first selection was a favorite of John's when he was a member of the choir.

"There is a blessed home Beyond this land of woe. Where trials never come, Nor tears of sorrow flow; Where faith is lost in sight, And patient hope is crowned, And everlasting light Its glory throws around."

The second song, "The Day of Resurrection" was chosen as a fitting close of Rev. MacWhorter's subject "The Certainty of Future Life."

JOBS FOR SOLDIERS

U S Government Agent Tells of Work Done to Keep Fighting Men Away from Agitators

During May the Illinois division of the United States Employment Service, and co-operating agencies, found jobs for 6,263 soldiers and placed 30,305 civilians in employment.

American soldiers overseas are keenly interested in the prospects of employment after return to 'his country and discharge, according to Harold Stone, director of operations of the United States Employment Service, who has just returned from France after establishing the overseas work of the Federal Employment Service.

"Talk to men individually and in small groups," said Mr. Stone, "and you will find them anxious to know of the employment situation in this country generally and in their localities. Of all the men to whom I talked personally I found but one man who, altho he was not certain of getting his former job back, was not interested in 'the job question.'"

Mr. Stone, who also is in charge of the emergency bureaus for returning soldiers which the Federal Employment Service, with the cooperation of the welfare and other voluntary organizations, has established to supplement its regular offices, said that many men inquired at the overseas headquarters office of the United States Employment Service at Paris, for opportunities in France and other European countries, especially those with knowledge of foreign languages.

"There is probably no soldier in France who does not know, at least in a general way, of the government's arrangements to assist him in employment upon return to this country if he needs assistance."

"In connection with giving this information, we are urging the men to go home after discharge and not hang around the large cities if they don't live there, and to be on the lookout for any radical agitator who may try to talk to him. We are also making special effort to induce the men who came from farms to return to agriculture and pointing out the advantages of the farming industry to others."

Under the system installed by the Federal Employment Service under Mr. Stone's direction and by the orders of the War Department, every soldier is interviewed and carded as to whether or not he needs assistance to employment. The cards are filled out at the embarkation centers and in the transports, the commanding officers of every unit being charged with the superintendence of this work.

Upon arrival of each transport, the cards are sent to the national headquarters of the United States Employment Service in Washington, where they are immediately sorted by states and relayed to the federal directors of Federal Employment Service for the states. The directors in turn redistribute them among the offices and special soldiers' employment bureaus in the town and cities to which the men will go after discharge. In this way the local employment offices have opportunity to look up a job for a man in advance of his arrival.

Since the system was placed in operation more than 450,000 cards have been received and distributed and one-third to one-half of each consignment of cards stating that the men needed assistance to employment. The cards are reaching the headquarters of the United States Employment Service now at the rate of 60,000 a week.

FROST IN SIX WEEKS SINGS THE KATYDID

Katydids, supposed foretellers of frost are busy with their cheerful Ka-ty-did, she did, she did, o'night.

According to an old tradition it will be just six weeks from the time the first Katydid is heard until the weather is cold enough for frosts. They were heard on Forest Avenue Monday evening and six weeks would bring the date to September 1st. Residents of Maple Avenue, however, have been hearing them for a week.

They are early this year as nearly everything and it will be interesting to keep track of the first frost to see how close these old sayings come.
