"MEN, WOMEN, AND MONEY"

Marcel Middleton is the only daughter of parents who live in a small town in the Middle West. Through sacrifice on their part, she has been given a course in an exclusive girls' school in the East.
 When Marcel receives in invitation from Noel Parkton, her school chum, to spend the summer at the latter's home in the east, her parents insist that she accept the invitation, and even mortgage their little home that Marcel may be outfitted for the trip.
 Arriving at Noel's fashionable home Marcel receives the attention of two men. One is Cleveland Buchanan, a millionaire cynic, who believes that every girl has her price; the other is Julian Chadwick, who stands high in Food Value of Nuts.

 Pound for pound, walnuts or butternuts equal in food value a juicy steak, contain more protein (tissue building) food than white bread and but one-third less than eggs. In these days of food scarcity and high prices it is likely that the vast crop of native American nuts will receive the recognition that they deserve.—Popular Science Monthly.

society circles, but who is poor. Noel watches Chadwick's attentions to Marcel with a jealous eye, for she loves him, when she hears Chadwick propose marriage to Marcel, although Marcel refuses, her jealousy gets the upper hand, and she orders Marcel from her home.

Following this humiliating experience, comes the news that her father and mother have been killed in an automobile accident. She leaves for home and arriving there, attends to the settling up of the estate. After paying off the mortgage on the home, she finds she has two thousand dollars left with which to face the world. Discontented with life in a small town Marcel again goes East, hoping to increase her two thousand in a quicker way than by doing housework or teaching school.

Marcel is now awakened to the fallacy of the life she has been leading and a change takes place in her viewpoint of life. When she had been in her glory, she had made the friend-ship of "Madame Ribout's," by a kind act, and now Katie invites Marcel to live with her, which proposition Marcel accepts.

At the end of her first weeks work, she sends Buchanan five dollars as a first installment on the payment of the two thousand dollars gambling debt. Impressed by this act, Buchanan's better self is aroused, and he at once takes up settlement work as a means of doing something for his fellow men. Through his aid, Katie's little sickly brother, Ted, is restored to health. He refuses to accept money from Marcel and her respect for him is restored.

Each now believing and trusting in each other, Buchanan and Marcel are wedded, and devote their lives to Buchanan's new work of helping the less fortunate of his fellow men.

DEVELOPMENT OF YOUNG PIG CROP

Mother's Milk Is Undoubtedly One of Best Available Feeds for Little Porkers.

SELF-FEEDER MEETS FAVOR

Where Youngsters Have Access to Corn, Shorts, Middlings, Etc., They Can Be Weaned Without Making Radical Change in Diet.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many farmers wean pigs at six to seven weeks of age, when the brood sows have a good flow of milk and are capable of maintaining the young in excellent condition and development at less expense and trouble than the young porkers could otherwise be handled. Their mother's milk is one of the best feeds available for growing pigs, and consequently it should be used to the greatest extent possible.

When the pigs are from six to seven weeks old the sow should be on full feed, unless for some extraordinary reason the pigs should not be weaned until the age of ten weeks, and in such instances it is preferable to allow them to run with their mother until they are twelve to fourteen weeks old. Where pigs are weaned too early serious results often attend, as the abrupt change in the character of the ration many times creates serious trouble.

Self-Feeder Is Useful.
 Where young pigs have access to corn, shorts, middlings, tankage, or fish meal, served to them cafeteria style in a self-feeder where they can eat it at their pleasure without being disturbed by other hogs, the youngsters can be weaned at the age of twelve or fourteen weeks without making any very radical changes in their daily meals by simply allowing them to continue on the self-service system. If best results are to be obtained, the pigs must gain continuously and uniformly until they are ready for market. This necessitates an abundance of feed as well as access during the grazing season to such valuable forage crops as alfalfa and red clover. In sections where these leguminous feeds cannot be produced, rye, oats, barley, cowpeas, rape, or any other grain or grass which will produce good forage in the locality should be grown for hog pasture. Hogs like to harvest their own feed. In addition to getting the feed in the freshest possible condition, the young shoats also derive benefits from the exercise in rustling a part of their daily diet.

Watch Pigs Closely.
 Every hog raiser is advised to watch the spring pigs closely to see that they are on their feed; that is, that the animals have good appetites and eat their daily allowances of grain and grass with relish and avidity. If a pig shows indications of being "off feed" his owner should change the ration, using barley in place of corn and providing as much skim milk or buttermilk as is available. He should also provide an abundance of pure, fresh water for the pigs as well as plenty of shade during the hot summer months.

Freedom from lice means hog comfort. This can be obtained by the plentiful use of crude or black oil upon the animals as well as in their quarters and wallows. Natural shade is always the best, but where this is not obtainable, temporary shelter from the sunny smile of Old Sol may be obtained by setting some posts to which crosspieces are attached about 3 1/2 to 4 feet from the ground so that a temporary roof of straw or grass may be provided for the protection of the hogs.

HENS FOR SMALL BACK YARDS

Light-Colored Birds Should Be Avoided as Their Plumage Shows Dirt Too Readily.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In choosing pullets for small back yards very light-colored and white birds should be avoided as their plumage shows dirt too readily. Where the soil of the yard is clayey, pullets with feathers on the legs and toes with more than four toes on each foot should be rejected.

Best Eggs for Market.
 Hens that do not run with the season will produce inferior eggs—which keep best and market best.
