"A SOCIETY EXILE"

At Dicke Theatre Thursday, October 3rd. Nora Shand, a charming young American heiress, has written a successful novel, "Diana." Chaperoned by her aunt, Nora goes to England to visit Lady Carnworth, whose worthless brother, Lord Bissett, is an ardent admirer of Nora's hand. The young man is heavily in debt, and looks to Nora's fortune to make life once again easy. Nora, however, repeatedly refuses him. There he meets Nora (now known as Christine). Their friendship deepens into love. In a letter she tells him her whole story. He never receives the letter, but she believes that he has—that he understands. They are married and return to London that Nora's expected child may be born in England. She learns that he never received the letter, and now dares not risk her happiness by telling him who she is. The day of their arrival in England, Bissett calls, sees Nora alone, and demands her pearls as the price of his silence. He is accused by Newell of theft, and, to defend himself, tells Newell that his wife is Nora Shand. Newell orders Nora from his sight. She leaves the house, heartbroken, and returns to Italy where her son is born. Newell forces the whole truth from Bissett and realizes Nora's innocence. The agonized husband searches all London for Nora in vain. He returns to Venice and there perfect happiness comes to them both when he finds her and their son.

COMFORT OF HOG MOST DESIRABLE

Well-Made Sanitary Wallow is Like Coney Island Bathing Beach for Porkers.

CONCRETE TYPE IS POPULAR

Grower Faces Two Temperature Extremes in Many of Pork-Producing States—Many Farmers Neglect Proper Shelter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is as natural for the hog to want to wallow as it is for the small boy to scurry to the old swimming hole with the first breath of spring. Hot weather is hard on fat animals, the portly porker included. That is why a well-made, sanitary hog wallow is like a Coney Island bathing beach for the hogs. A popular and serviceable type of wallow advocated by the United States department of agriculture should be made of concrete about 12 inches in depth and large enough to accommodate the herd of hogs. The wallow should be supplied with a satisfactory intake and outlet so that it can be filled about two-thirds full of water and drained every few days, or as often as is necessary to keep the pool fresh and clean. At the present time a test is being made at the experimental farm of the department of agriculture at Beltsville, Md., to determine the value of the cement hog wallow as a comfort for hogs. The results of this investigation will be published upon completion early in the fall. Temperature Extremes. The hog grower in many of the leading pork-producing states faces two temperature extremes during the year. During the winter, unless he provides comfortable houses and warm quarters, his hogs are likely to suffer from the cold, while in the summer season he must handle the animals under conditions of extreme heat. Any animal as fat as the average hog which is to be marketed in the late summer or early fall suffers greatly during hot weather, and unfortunately many hog farmers neglect to provide shelter and protection for their hogs from the extreme heat. During hot weather hogs need an abundance of shade—natural shade, such as is furnished by trees and bushes being the best. Temporary Shelter. Where natural shade and shelter are not available, the hog owner should put up a temporary shelter by building a framework about 4 feet high and thoroughly covering the top with brush, straw, grass, or hay. This inexpensive sunshade should be of sufficient size to protect a herd of hogs in comfort as they lie under it. As a rule, the ordinary hog house should not be used for shade purposes during the summer. Each year hog mortality is comparatively heavy due to "porker sunstroke" induced by maintaining the hogs in the open without sufficient protection from the ruddy glow of Old Sol's furnace.

APPLY MANURE IN ORCHARDS

Failure of Many Trees to Produce Fruit is Due to Lack of Necessary Plant Food.

Undoubtedly the failure, or partial failure, of many fruit trees to bring forth a crop is due to lack of plant food. Professional orchardists look after this matter, but the average farmer who has a few trees, which he dignifies by the name of "orchard," gives scant heed to providing them with fertility. He may turn the sheep or the calves in among them but such fertility as they add is apt to be of slight value, comparatively speaking.

YOUNG ANIMALS NEED CARE

They Should Be Given Such Attention as Will Insure Them Most Favorable Start.

The young animals should require such care and attention as will give them a favorable start. Every practical animal husbandman knows that unless he is in a position to give his young animals plenty of the right kind of feed and protect them from cool rains and other animals they will not thrive. This is where a good beginning means a favorable ending.

THE COMPROMISE

By GLADYS P. ANDERSEN.

Mrs. Adams was making preparations for the noon meal when the door opened quickly and a girl about sixteen rushed in, quite out of breath. "I'm here at last, mother."

Mrs. Adams glanced up from her work. "I was calling Vivian," she said.

"Why, mother, I am Vivian." The girl threw back her curly head and laughed merrily. "Won't you ever be able to tell us twins apart?"

"I thought by the way you came in through the door 'twas Virginia. She always comes in like a shot from a gun. Where have you girls been?"

"Down by the river. The wind blew so we did not hear you when you first called."

"Well," said Mrs. Adams, "Miss Emery has just been here and invited both of you girls to her musicale next Wednesday evening."

"She said it was going to be just grand. Professor West, who has just returned from France, is going to sing. He is Sergeant West now, you know."

"You said she invited us both?" Vivian gasped.

"Yes, dear, and I am afraid you will have a hard time deciding," her mother answered.

"There's nothing to decide. It's Virginia's turn. I went to the sociable last month, you know. Oh, how I wish we had more than one best dress!" she exclaimed passionately.

It was not until Wednesday morning that Vivian appeared to cheer up somewhat. She had a consultation with her mother, who interrupted her by exclaiming, "It will never do. Of course there's no harm in it, but if you get into any trouble, don't blame anyone but yourselves."

"No one will ever know about it," responded Vivian confidently.

"I'll go down to the village now and call at Mrs. Blake's. I know she will be willing."

Mrs. Blake lived across from Miss Emery's, and she received Vivian cordially.

That evening, Virginia, in her pink silk muslin that belonged to her and her sister jointly, went timidly up the path leading to the Emery home, feeling very happy.

Miss Emery, in beautiful brocaded silk, was passing through the hall when Virginia was shown in by the butler.

"Which one is it?" she asked. "I'm sorry you both couldn't have come." Virginia was placed where she could see everyone who played or sang. Then she gave herself up to enjoyment. She watched Sergeant West eagerly. It was only in dreams that she had ever heard such tones.

Sergeant West saw her and met the vivid glance of her eyes. He turned to his hostess and said, "Can that young lady sing?"

"Indeed she can," answered Miss Emery proudly.

The next moment Virginia felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked admiringly into Sergeant West's face. "Will you sing for me?" he asked.

"I will play for you and you may sing what you please. Are you willing?"

"I'll try," she answered shyly.

It was nearly an hour later that Sergeant West again remembered the girl.

"I want you to sing once more," he said. "I have a plan. You have a voice, and with teaching, you could become a singer. Perhaps I can arrange to give you a couple of hours each week."

"I'm afraid I am a bit timid," said the girl, "but since you ask me I will try."

He was sorry for her as she stood by the piano. Her face was very white, and her lips almost stiff.

"Have courage," said the singer. "You did so well before."

The accompaniment began; but when an untutored, but rich contralto voice commenced the song there was a sudden discord among the keys of the piano, and Sergeant West wheeled about and stared at the trembling girl beside him. "What does it mean?" cried the artist.

"It cannot be possible that this girl has two distinct singing voices, one very high and the other very low."

The girl at whom everyone was now looking, tried twice to speak before she could say a word. Then she stammered, "I—I am the other twin if you please, sir."

"You are not the one that sang first?" he asked.
