THE HOME OF BETTER PICTURES
 Moving pictures, such as are shown at the Dicke Theatre, do more than amuse and entertain. They instruct. They tell stories in more interesting fashion than any writer, for they bring them to the eye. They teach geography, history in the making, and bring the four corners of the world to one's own neighborhood.
 Of course moving pictures do not set themselves forth as a teacher. They would fail in their purpose if they did that. Rather do they cloak their lessons beneath the tempting tinsel of entertainment, and that is just why their lessons sink so deeply into the film entranced brain.
 We go away from the Dicke Theatre knowing a bit more about the world and the living things of the world.

A glittering story of enticing youth—sparkling with love and humor. It tells the story of a young mad-cap who is the despair of her conventional sister, the joy of her father and the conqueror of a mere man who finds it impossible not to fall madly in love with her.

"THE SPITE BRIDE"

"The Spite Brides" is chock-full of romance, what we all crave and what most of us have only in small doses. It portrays the stage, the kidnapping of a sweetheart, a shipwreck, adrift in a small boat, the love of a young man for a beautiful girl—and a touch of mystery. In short—it's a great picture.
