

ALL THE WORLD IS NOW YOUR NEIGHBOR

Why You Need a Metropolitan Paper in Your Home

The world is in a ferment, and all the world is now your neighbor.

To-day's problems in Europe and Asia may be your problems to-morrow. It is therefore necessary for you to know, quickly and certainly, what your most distant "neighbors" are thinking, planning and doing.

In this sense you are living to-day in two worlds—the smaller world 'round about you and the greater world outside.

You need news of both worlds.

Your local Home Paper keeps you fully informed of the world at home, but the equally vital news of the greater world is best brought to you every evening by the Metropolitan Paper.

London, Paris, Berlin, New York, Washington and Chicago are the great news-distributing centers of the world. The papers in these six great cities therefore, are, expected to print all the news of all the world—first. In this respect these Metropolitan Papers are in a class by themselves.

There is a recognized leading paper in each of these six big cities—some one newspaper which (compared with the others) has a larger and more competent news-gathering staff, stationed at more strategic news "points" throughout the world.

In Chicago this leading Metropolitan Paper is The Chicago Daily News—first in Chicago in cable news, in telegraph news; first in industrial, financial and market news; first in features, in circulation and in advertising.

It is this leading Metropolitan Paper—The Chicago Daily News—which you may have delivered to your home every week-day for 15 CENTS A WEEK.

Do you know of any other expenditure of 60 cents a month from which father, mother, son and daughter, old and young, can secure so much information, education and entertainment?

Taken in conjunction with the important local news in your Home Paper, the Metropolitan Paper will bring all the world to your fireside every evening, and that, we submit, is the place in your home which The Chicago Daily News can occupy to your advantage and profit.

The World-Newspaper

No American newspaper is better organized to give you the needed world-news day by day than The Chicago Daily News.

The Chicago Daily News maintains permanent offices in London, Paris, and Berlin. It maintains a larger staff of special correspondents of its own in Europe and the Far East—where world-history is now in the making—than any other newspaper. This is in addition to the very complete world-news service of The Associated Press, which has correspondents all over the habitable globe. Here are the names of some of the famous correspondents who are gathering and cabling directly and exclusively to The Chicago Daily News important and informing world-news:

EDWARD PRICE BELL has been in charge of the London office of The Daily News for nearly twenty years. His wartime interviews with Lord Haldane and Viscount Grey were re-published in practically every newspaper of any standing in the world. Mr. Bell was recently honored by a testimonial dinner in London, attended by many famous journalists and public men, at which he was called "an ambassador of understanding between Great Britain and America."

PAUL SCOTT MOWRER is head of the Paris office of The Daily News. During the war he passed many long periods with the troops at the front, describing the great offensive of four years' warfare, including Verdun, the Champagne, the Somme, battles of the Aisne and the second battle of the Marne—concluding with the Peace Conference at Versailles. His work was considered of so high a character that the French government gave him the greatest honor in its command, the insignia of the Legion of Honor.

GORDON STILES, long associated with the London office of The Daily News is now resident correspondent in charge of The Daily News office in Berlin, at Unter den Linden.

JOHN F. DASS' notable work as a war correspondent extends over a score of years and includes service in the Balkans, the near east, Russia and France.

EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER, Rome correspondent of The Daily News, performed unusual feats of reporting during the war. He was frequently under fire when the great days of Italian history were being lived, taking part in the retreat of the Italian army after the disaster of Caporetto.

A. R. DECKER served during the war principally on the French front. When America entered the fight Mr. Decker became attached to the American naval patrol off the coast of France. When the armistice came Mr. Decker was sent immediately into the Central Empires and was one of the first American newspaper men to reach Berlin. He sent a notable series of messages from the seat of the late Hungarian bolshevik government in Budapest.

LOUIS EDGAR BROWNE, regarded as one of the most intrepid of American war correspondents, made an enviable reputation for himself during the war by his exclusive descriptions of the fighting on Gallipoli and the retreat of the Serbian army through the Albanian mountains. Mr. Browne has just completed an investigation into the conditions in Asiatic Turkey.

MICHAEL FARBMAN is a careful student of Russian affairs. He has made valuable studies of conditions in the German republic and in the new Balkan states.

WILLIAM E. NASH, is a graduate of Harvard and an accomplished linguist. He was attached to general headquarters, U. S. army, at Chaumont, France, as an intelligence officer, receiving enemy newspapers and information. His correspondence from Paris and also from Fiume and Trieste has attracted much attention.

ANTHONY CZARNECKI is on his second tour of investigation of Poland and adjoining countries. Mr. Czarniecki is an authority on Poland, and during his trip in 1916 to these regions, when they were under the heel of Germany, he was enabled to gain a knowledge of many inside facts and to carry these with him through the German barriers to the outside world.

ISAAC DON LEVINE is a young writer of unusual brilliancy, the author of several books and magazine articles, who has been sent by The Daily News to tell real stories of what is taking place in soviet Russia. He was permitted to enter Petrograd and Moscow by the Lenin government, and his descriptions of conditions there have caused interest not only in America, but in Europe.

LUDOVIC H. GRONDIJS, originally a professor in the University of Dordrecht, Holland, is representing The Daily News with the armies of Admiral Kolchak in eastern Russia. He is an authority on Russian affairs.

GEORGE WITTE, covers Germany and the new countries on the eastern and southern borders of Germany. He has traveled widely in central Europe.

W. TCHERKESOFF, who also writes on Russian topics, is a Georgian nobleman, who was exiled under the czar for his liberal views. For many years he was a close friend and co-worker of Prince Kropotkin and other liberal leaders.

Other foreign correspondents of The Chicago Daily News are:

WILLIAM R. GILES, resident correspondent at Peking, who has written many notable stories of Chinese affairs and has visited Manchuria, Mongolia, Shantung and Korea in the course of his study of conditions there.

ERNEST W. CLEMENT, resident correspondent of The Daily News at Tokyo.

HAL O'FLAHERTY, Stockholm, a gifted American correspondent with a wide knowledge of European affairs.

DR. MARIO BORSA, Milan, Italy, is leading political writer on the Corriere della Sera, Milan; was the best informed Italian correspondent at the Peace Conference.

LEOPOLD ALETRINO, Amsterdam, Holland, a journalist of Amsterdam well versed in Dutch politics and finance.

The Chicago Daily News also maintains News Bureaus of its own in Washington and New York.

The foregoing merely presents the daily service which The Chicago Daily News can be to your family as an indispensable WORLD-newspaper. Future announcements will describe The Daily News as a Domestic Paper—will show its many exclusive features for young or old, boy or girl, parent or child and for general family reading.

The Chicago Daily News is usually a 34-page newspaper, eight columns to the page. It costs nearly $6,000,000 a year to produce The Chicago Daily News, or about $19,000 per issue.

One of England's great newspapers, the Daily Chronicle of London, says that "The Chicago Daily News is by far the best evening newspaper in the world."
