Mary Pickford plays the character of a mountain girl, a loyal Kentucky clansman, who promises her "pap" as he lies dying from a feudist that she will "get" his slayer—cheated out of her heritage by land grabbers, she heads the Night Raiders, who slay the gang leader. She is tried for murder but wins her freedom. Then comes the great crisis when she faces her father's slayer. The story was written by that noted author, John Fox, Jr.

Firemen's Masquerade at Dicke's Hall New Year's Eve.
ODD FELLOWS ATTENTION! Next Tuesday evening, December 23, the lodge will give a Christmas Party for Odd Fellows and their families. The party is primarily for the children, so be sure and bring them. If you have any relatives or friends visiting you bring them along. Do not let company keep you at home. There will be no regular meeting of the Order on Monday evening, December 22nd.
The members of the Boosters Club of the Odd Fellows surprised G. A. Swanson of Middaugh ave., a member of the club last Monday night after the lodge meeting had closed, the occasion being his birthday. While C. J. Winter detained Mr. Swanson at the lodge hall, W. H. Beidelman, Lawrence Foster and B. F. Lanphere, hurried to Swanson's home and sat around the table in the dark for him. Swanson and Winter parted ways at Prince and Prairie and when the former arrived home found a hilarious welcome waiting him. Mr. Swanson's genial wife had prepared a bounteous repast which was enjoyed to the fullest extent, the hour being past midnight when the party broke up. We would suggest that Gus get an illuminated key hole for his front door as it seems as though it would be rather cold standing on the front porch for ten minutes trying to unlock the front door.
