BATTLE WAGONS OFF ON TOUR OF HALF THE WORLD

With the Atlantic Fleet—Fully 15,000 sailors of the Atlantic fleet were merry and happy when Admiral Wilson, the commander-in-chief, hoisted the signal to "get under way" for southern waters on Thursday, January 8. They were happy because it meant new scenes, foreign cities, warm weather, swimming, athletics, and target practice and for some of them their first voyage on the Atlantic. And fully 15,000 mothers, sisters, and sweethearts were made sad to see "their boy" leaving, but were comforted by the fact that he will be back home again by May 1.

The Atlantic fleet, composed of 8 superdreadnaughts, a score of destroyers, submarines, mine force, supply ships, and a fleet of naval aircraft, will proceed to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, arriving there on January 13. After a short stay they will visit Barbadoes, then Port of Spain, Trinidad, of the British West Indies, and then Colon, the Atlantic port of the Panama Canal. They will stop at the canal, of course, and some of the various ships will have an opportunity to visit this great feat of engineering. After the visit to the canal the fleet will return to Guantanamo Bay to hold target practice, and fleet maneuvers will be held whenever the fleet is under way.

Fully 50 per cent of the personnel of the various ships have just recently come into the service and are looking forward to their first visit to a foreign port with great delight. Most of them have never made an ocean voyage, and no doubt there will be a few who will receive their first baptism of salt spray with a few misgivings, but with the true spirit of the American Navy, will "buck up" and make the best of it.

Peruvian Rain Tree.
It is estimated that one of the Peruvian rain trees will on the average yield nine gallons of water each day. In a field of an area of one kilometer square, that is, 5,250 feet each way, can be grown 10,000 trees separated from each other by twenty-five meters. This plantation produces daily 395,000 liters of water.
