Many customers, who have recently been to Bertolin's Store are want to kid Sam on account of the appearance of a foreign growth on his upper lip. Sam says it is a mustache. It makes us wonder.

For this Saturday evening the Curtiss has a great bill, "Fatty" Arbuckle in "The Garage," Anita Stewart in "The Mind the Paint Girl" and Hearst International News. Don't miss it.

The Booster Club of the I. O. O. F. met at the home of W. H. Rogers, on Rogers St. last evening and made plans for some rousing good times in the near future. After the business session a lunch of sandwiches, doughnuts, pickles and coffee was enjoyed.

At the next meeting of the local chapter, Womans Auxiliary to the American Legion, the application for a charter will be signed. Those who wish to appear as charter members of the organization must sign this application in person. The meeting will be held March 16.

The first real honest-to-goodness rain which this part of the country has had for many moons (meaning months, of course) started Wednesday evening and continued yesterday morning. The wind then shifted to the north and a regular March snow storm raged the rest of the day.

A birthday surprise party was given in honor of Alvin Hogrefe, Saturday evening, February 28th. Those present were Henry Hogrefe, Henry Dicke, Clarence Buschman, John Leimbundguth, Ed. Venard, William and Werner Wehrmeister, Mrs. Iehl and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. Hogrefe and family.

AN APPRECIATION OF JULIA MARLOW

Downers Grove, Feb. 23, 1920

To the Reporter:

At the time when "Knighthood was in Flower" was being played at the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, I recall as a single point of interest that still clings in the memory of the part in the play where, after King Henry had stormily declared to his sister, the Princess Mary, that she would have to marry King Louis, Julia Marlowe, who played this part, all of a sudden, dropping her attitude of defiance to her brother's wishes, exclaimed with her own incomparable native, in the language and tone of their childhood—"O Henry, I hurt my toe!" Poor Henry! as King he could command, but swept in an unexpected moment to the days when he was just a chum to his little sister. Ah, this was too much! Turning on his heel, I can yet hear his impotent exclamation as he left the scene with Mary in full command.

Thursday evening of last week, after some difficulty to secure good seats, I had the pleasure of seeing Miss Marlowe again, this time as the Page, Cesario, in "The Twelfth Night," and what a treat it was, especially with her actor-husband, Mr. Sothorn as Malvolio, and backed by their all-star cast. The thing that particularly struck me, however, was the same marvelously beautiful speaking voice, with its variability of register, and soft shadings. It reminded me so much of the way she had, in the play above referred to, temporarily "unhorsed" the King, her Brother, by this same art of hers. I had also seen Miss Marlowe a number of years ago as "Ophelia," and I could not but note her reserve power that alone explains her ability, in this same character, to conjure before us, not an actress portraying a scene, but the reality itself—Ophelia, the poor demented creature whose eyes gaped, at the strain, of her lover's unaccountable behavior, when Hamlet, himself playing mad, had killed her father, and deserted her.

Mr. Sothorn is of course very wonderful in impersonation, and I think particularly as the Steward in Twelfth Night, but my chief center of interest was a comparison of Miss Marlowe of today with her work of 15 years ago, and the thought forced itself upon me that even as it is scientifically true that in this world we become like unto those things we aspire to, so much "playing young" has evidently had its natural effect upon her, for she still seems, at least as the Page, possessed of a sort of perennial youth.

Ninety Sumatran Volcanoes.
The Boekit Barisan, a series of mountain ranges running the whole length of the island of Sumatra near the western coast, splits in the north into parallel chains which encircle the broad Karo-Batak plateau and the vast area of Tuba lake. In these partially explored ranges there have already been discovered 90 volcanoes, 12 of which are now active, the constructive and destructive forces of Sumatra's formation.—Melvin A. Hall in The National Geographic Magazine.

Flight of Geese.
When flocks of wild ducks and geese have to go long distances they form a triangle to cleave the air more easily, and the most courageous bird takes position at the forward angle. As this is a very fatiguing post, another bird ere long takes the place of the exhausted leader.

Wonderful Yellowstone Park.
The Yellowstone National park, the crowning wonder of America's wonderlands, has within its area 3,312 square miles, several high mountain ranges, three large rivers with their tributaries, 26 lakes and 25 waterfalls.

D.A.E. GAVE WASHINGTON LUNCHEON

Home of Mrs. H. S. Paine Was Scene of Last Meeting of the Downers Grove Chapter

Downers Grove Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution celebrated the anniversary of the birthday of Washington by a luncheon at the home of Mrs. H. S. Paine, hostesses. Mrs. H. S. Paine, Miss Grace Stever.

The table set for twelve was beautifully decorated in red, white and blue. The guests were Mesdames L. Hannum (Regent), Geo. M. Allison,

M. E. Downer, M. A. Stone, Frankfield, A. E. Whitcomb, Whitney, Misses Barnover, Helen Ford, Anna Roe.

Mrs. H. S. Paine talked on the Armenian situation and the drive soon to be made for their relief. A very fine paper, written by Miss Helen Downer was read by Mrs. Whitehorn, subject "The Political Parties from 1861 to 1898" and a motion was made that all present would study up on both sides of the political question, and a letter from Gen. Wood to our chapter was put on file, in which he regrets his inability to be with us before the 23rd at the unveiling of the bronze tablet in honor of our "Heroes in Flanders Fields" but expresses his willingness to serve us at a future date.

Your Clothes

DO THEY HELP YOU OR BETRAY YOU?

The world usually judges a man's ability and mental attitude by his clothes.

Frayed trousers and a baggy coat indicate almost invariably a condition where the man has ceased to care—his ambition is paralyzed—he is slipping.

A man with enough self-respect and gumption to be reasonably particular about his clothes will show the same spirit in his work. He is aggressive and anxious to show the world what he can do. He will get ahead.

Let us measure you for some "Clothes That Make The Success Spirit." We will build into them a dash and individuality only genuine merchant-tailoring can produce and they will fit.

The cost will be no more than for ordinary clothes.
