SENIOR CLASS PLAY PLEASSED LAST THURSDAY

John Babbage, as George Rous, deserves a place far up on the list of those whose acting showed really superior ability. With his English accent, and a very evidently natural talent for dramatic work, he was one of those who received most favorable comment from the audience.

Edward Tank's work was good—a keen, business like chap, making himself one with the board of directors, and again making himself one with the workmen whom he addressed, he showed himself versatile.

Frank Dutton, one of the directors, was excellent in voice and manner. He appeared a thoroughly business man, having at his tongue's end the entire situation. Seeming absolutely at home on the stage, he played with that perfect "art that conveys art."

Ben Morgan as "Edgar Anthony," idealist and dreamer, took his part well. Loving his father, yet standing by his convictions, he portrayed very well the struggle thru which he went.

Edwin Graves as choleric Wm. Scantlebury was fine. Granite without but with a soft heart underneath, he was one of the bright spots in the play.

Stanley Huntington as Oliver Wanklin, calm, cool and pacific, made a splendid balance for the excitable Wm. Scantlebury.

The part of the manager, played by Wm. Hammer, was well done. Anxious to save his men from suffering, and equally anxious to be loyal to his Board, the part was not an easy one.

Henry Tench, middle aged secretary, with a doglike devotion to his employer, was very cleverly played by Russell Winchell.

Arthur Mills took very well the part of an old man; make up and characterization were both good.

Sidney McCollum, as "Frost," Anthony's valet, was excellent, and brot down the house whenever he appeared. Meek, imperturbable and stolid, he was the typical English servant.

The mob scene, featuring George Bunge, Howard Wilhelm, Richard Drees, Elmer O'Neill and Edward Kolar brought forth many complimentary remarks from the audience. The sullen, angry movements of the mob, its tendency to be swayed by the latest speaker, its unwillingness to listen to anything quietly, all of these characteristics were brought out in a very true-to-life manner by the group.

Much credit is due these young people for the ability they showed in "putting over the footlights" such a play as this, and, on the merely mechanical side, praise is due for their clear, distinct enunciation and their very natural acting.

The one who is responsible for the great success of the play is the person who did the training and too much praise cannot be given to Miss Frances Hughes, who worked unceasingly from the time the first practice was given until the play was staged for the public.

Why One Should Carry An Account With a Bank

1. Because your money is safer in a bank than anywhere else.
2. Because paying bills by check is the simplest and most convenient method, as well as the safest, as your check becomes a receipt for the debt it pays.
3. Because it gives a better standing in the community, especially among the business men, to pay by check rather than cash.
