Dotheboys Hall.
In "Nicholas Nickleby," one of Dickens' best novels, occurs the name, Dotheboys hall. It is the name of a boarding school in the north of England, kept by a heartless villain named Squeers, a place where boys were taken in and "done for." Squeers' system of tuition consisted of alternate beating and starving. In Dickens' time, it is said, such schools existed, and his account of the one over which Squeers presided did much to bring about their extinction.

A FEW CENTS

By H. F. C.

A one cent piece is a very useful piece of money—just a simple little coin, but a mighty weighty one, when distributed among 15,000 employees in the Chicago Telephone Company. Recently a word or two was said about the $3.00 a week increase, given to every Telephone operator, adding more than one million dollars yearly to the pay roll, and the Telephone Company is not ashamed that the increase, was only a few cents a day, because every cent an hour increase, was more than it could afford to give at present rates for service. But each cent an hour, by the way, given to all, adds about an half million dollars to the pay roll. Of course, a cent won't buy anything these days except one thinks of telephone service and that a business man's single line, with service 24 hours a day, 31 days a month, costs less than a cent an hour—one cent an hour would be $7.44 a month, whereas, the rate is only $5.00 and less. This little cent again—not much to the individual—not a great deal to pay for service, but a few more cents daily from subscribers would enable the Telephone Company to pay millions of dollars to it's help, who in turn, spend it with the subscribers, who buy service. The Company needs these few cents only during these times of high prices.
