at the joint marketing conference of falo of Padua. farm organization and co-operative marketing associations held in Chicago on July 23 and 24 has been named by J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

This committee will endeavor to work out a plan of grain marketing on which all organizations can unite to really revolutionize marketing conditions for every farmer in the United States. When this committee is ready to report another agricultural conference will be held to hear and pass on the report.

Different from past committees that have been appointed to do something for the farmer, this body of men represents not only the strength of one big farmer's organization but several; not only one state but the entire grain growing section. Three Illinois men will be membrs of this committee, William G. Eckhardt, representing the Farm Bureaus and the Illinois Agricultural Association; Clifford Thorne of Chicago, representing the Farmer's
