Spencer Popular in America.

Herbert Spencer, the great philosopher, was more popular in America during his life than in England. When Spencer visited the United States, in 1882, his fame and influence were so securely established that one admirer offered to pay all the expenses incurred by the philosopher on his trip, and heads of railways offered him the most luxurious traveling facilities, while other friends went with one another to make the tour comfortable, interesting and instructive.

The Folks Next Door.

On what ocean is Callao? What language do they speak in Montevideo? What is the big port of Argentina? Where is Quito? How does Rio de Janeiro compare in size with Richmond, Va.? Is La Paz a mountain or south of Buenos Ayres? Is there a law against automobiles in Brazil? If so, what? Why do they speak French in Louisiana? Or do they? Try these questions on a business trip to South America.

A BELATED GIFT

By JENNIE LITTLE.

The sun enveloped the great hospital that 26th day of December as if determined to transform its grim walls and quiet corridors, with their suggestions of dread and pain, into chambers of hope and victory.

The youngest doctor on the staff, teasingly dubbed the Infant by his older colleagues, rounded a corner and bumped squarely into a pile of fresh linen, carried by the youngest nurse.

"A thousand pardons," he cried joyfully. "Christmas has gone to my head, as usual. The top of the morning after to you, Miss Rutledge. Gee! I love the whole world today, even the cranky old doctor in room 3.

"Because why? The only girl said 'Yes' last night, and in three months more, no lonesome bachelor quarters, but a little 'Home, Sweet Home,' for mine. Gee! Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling? Did you get both your stockings full, as you deserve?"

He stopped suddenly, for the little nurse was winking with all her might to keep back the tears.

"All we nurses," she said solemnly, "swore to give all we could spare to the Red Cross and Salvation Army instead of buying presents for each other, so my stockings hung all limp and blank, for I have no other friends in the city. I am truly glad for you, Doctor O'Connor," and she hurried away.

Later, detailed for special duty in room 5, Nurse Rutledge walked softly to the bedside and laid a plying hand above the bandaged eyes, for she couldn't seem to batten her heart against suffering, as they told her she should to make a success. "Medicine time," she announced cheerily; then caught her breath as if icy water had struck her, and went all trembly, like a little poplar leaf in a storm.

"Kit!" cried the patient, half imploringly, half incredulously. "Little Kit! Answer! Is it you?" and with his free hand tried to tear the bandage off.

"Mr. Rand, don't risk your sight!" she begged in horror. "Oh, why did I ever come here? How did you get hurt like this?"

"I was a good fellow and had found myself a job in the city. You see, I was a prisoner. 'Kit, why did you run away? Every day since I have been in a King, but I couldn't leave. I was a part of a trail of his country, a little kid was out trying his Christmas sled and shot right in front of a loaded trigger. He wasn't hurt but I got a broken arm and leg, and my eyes have a lot to say to me."

"The only thing I minded was to be delayed in my work, and after all it isn't so bad, when you are well. Wonderful! Now tell me something or I shall raise a riot and take down everything I disagree with, the rules of this hospital. Well, what's the trouble?"

"You guessed hard for the words, tried to stab in, but throat unspoken. 'You're a good fellow and had found myself a job in the city. You see, I was a prisoner. 'Kit, why did you run away? Every day since I have been in a King, but I couldn't leave. I was a part of a trail of his country, a little kid was out trying his Christmas sled and shot right in front of a loaded trigger. Kortan Race a Mixture.

The Kortans are taller than either the Chinese or Japanese. They are robust and vigorous, indefatigable workers and are in great demand in Japan as mechanics. There are different races in the country, and there is a great diversity of features. Some faces are entirely void of hair; others have rich, silky curls and whiskers, while those of others present nothing but a coarse tangled mass.

Cuba's Varieties of Hardwood.

Cuba has about 267 varieties of excellent hardwoods. Besides mahogany and cedar, there are about thirty species of palm. The royal palm is probably the most useful tree on the island, every part from leaves to roots being utilized by natives.

Caterpillars Watch for Enemies.

The caterpillar knows that there is safety in numbers, and whole companies may be found feeding side by side while keeping a sharp lookout for their bird enemies; but when a caterpillar is by himself he scarcely dares to move for fear of attracting attention.
