The Helpfulness of a Dream

A tired mother sat down for a moment toward the close of a hot day. She had finished cleaning the vegetables for a hungry family's dinner and closed her eyes in a refreshing little cat-nap before she must be up and doing to have things ready.

She tried to think of some dainty warm weather, dessert, but nothing seemed just right—she dozed.

Just a very few moments later she awoke from a pleasant little dream—of an afternoon party where they served a delicious ice.

Oh! Just the thing for dinner tonight—ice cream for dessert—and, of course, it must be the reliably good, pure McBride Bros & Knobbe Special from the drug store.
