Beautiful Sunday

By Jake Falstaff

It was such a bright morning
That the cows, coming out of the cool, dark barns feeling a good deal better, Stood for a while and blinked,
And the young heifers said to each other,
"Oh, my!

I never saw such a pretty day!

Let's jump over fences!

Let's go running up and down lanes with our tails in the air".

And the old sisterly Jerseys

Thought to themselves, "That patch of white clover

Over in the corner where the woodchucks are Ought to be about ready for a good going over".

Well, you never saw anything in your life like the way the young ducks were acting.

They were tearing in and out of the water Making enough noise to be heard all over the township;

Even the robins were scandalized

And sat around in the trees looking sideways and one-eyed at them.

All the crawdads in that part of the creek Picked up and moved, and the sober old snake Slipped off his rock and went for a walk in the briars.

The old white horse taking two gray people to meeting

Held up his head and said to himself,

"Look at those ropes!

Watch me bust them!"

And all of a sudden he felt so good

That he threw up his hind quarters and gave a big, two-legged kick.

And the old gray woman said, "Well I swan to gracious!"

And the old gray man got all tangled up in the lines

And nearly fell out of the buggy, reaching for the whip,

"Whoa, there," he said, "Whoa, there, Roosevelt!

Hold on now! What in the Sam Hill is into you?"

About fourteen hundred Mayapple stems,
With their parasols up, marched down the hill
And all the spring beauties turned up their pale peaked noses

And said, "Don't them Mayapples

Think they're somebody

With their bumbershoots up!"

Oh, it was a grand day, a specially grand day,

And all the flowers were so sweet

That the butterflies sneezed,

And the young goats and the lambs

Couldn't think of anything special enough

In the way of capers and didoes,

So they just stood still and looked wise.
