Princess Elizabeth in Oxford, and East Nissouri Juniors, demonstrations on flower arrangement; Uniondale, a talk on the Canadian Association of Consumers; Woodstock North, a talk on "How Places Got Their Names"; Hepworth, a talk on "Women in Civic Affairs."

Coldwater Seniors' honors were divided between a demonstration on weaving and a talk on books by the librarian. The report says "Nearly all the members later read the books reviewed." Vasey placed first a demonstration on "The Uses of Honey"; Orono, a history of the Institute by a charter member; Amherst Island, a demonstration on making a lamp shade by a local girl attending Ryerson Institute; Canboro and Rainham Centre, talks by a representative of the Grand Valley Conservation Authority; Cayuga, a talk and demonstration on hobbies; Mansfield, its November meeting with a local clergyman speaking on Remembrance Day; Braemar, a showing of the International Harvesters' film Kitimat, with the pupils of three public schools as guests; Maple Leaf Lennox, an address by a board member, Mrs. James Haggerty, on the Mary Collect, "explaining each line"; Stewart Beamsville, a demonstration of bathing a patient in bed and changing the bed with the patient in it; Louth, a talk by a local barrister on "Laws Pertaining to Ontario Women"; Hurdman's Bridge, a talk on laws and women's property rights; New England, an address on "Making a Will," the speaker also answering questions; Queenston-St. Davids, a weaving demonstration where the members were given an opportunity to use the loom; Bridgeport, a program on "Supplying Wholesale Reading for the Home"; Goring, an address on United Nations; Kent Centre, an achievement day when the members exhibited their handicrafts or hobbies.

Edgewood Juniors placed first a meeting where a representative from a beauty salon spoke on diet, hair styling and manicuring; Lucan Juniors, a demonstration of candy making; Big Five Juniors, the meeting where the girls entertained their parents; Hillier and Ameliasburg Juniors, a "Know Ontario" program; Ripley Juniors, and Port Elgin Juniors, talks by a clergyman on Choosing a Mate; Tiverton Juniors, a talk and exhibit of antiques "which gave the young people a new interest in their old treasures and helped them to prepare for their county exhibit at the fair"; East Elgin Juniors, a talk by Prof. Weall, horticulturist at the O.A.C. on landscaping in connection with the farm entrance; Colwash Juniors, a meeting to which they invited two senior Institutes and had a program on table setting and table manners.

__wi__

Rural Ridgetown gave first place to the meeting when "a flag with proper standard was presented in memory of twenty-five deceased members"; Gravelridge, a demonstration on house plants and flower arrangement; Dunrobin, a talk on art with slides of good pictures; Maple, an artist's talk and demonstration on art and color in the home "which helped the members to realize that anyone can be a home artist;" Patricia, a study of the home county, Wentworth; Emsdale, a meeting with demonstrations on growing bulbs, planting a ming tree and making sandwiches; Blue. vale, a talk on house plants and starting slips: Renton and Laura Rose reported programs on Ceylon; Rugby, a talk on World Community; Fenella, an address by a school teacher on a teacher's impressions of the course of study. followed by questions from the members: Brooke, a talk on Wills and a discussion on radio and television evaluation; Phelps, an illustrated talk on children's books; Elm Grove, a talk on books and the showing of a neighboring Institute's Tweedsmuir history: Cheltenham, a school inspector's address on pre-school children; Uniondale, a talk on 'Know Your Canada"; Carry-on, a meeting held in the school with a talk by the music instructor and a musical program by the children; Conn, a flower show by the members with the judge giving an illustrated talk on flower arrangement.

--WI---

Many branches reported the program put on by the 4-H Homemaking Club girls as the best of the year. At Brooksdale the girls gave demonstration-lectures on "Garden Vegetables" and "What Shall I Wear?" Seventeen girls received spoons from the Institutes for completing their club projects. Bluebell's outstanding feature was a talk on Homemaking club work by the county Home Economist, Miss Jean Steckle. Jarratt Creighton's best program was when the club girls entertained the Institute members at an afternoon tea and demonstrated table setting, table manners and sandwiches. Glen, a fashion show by the "Glen Wallettes" with one of the girls acting as commentator. South March, a program arranged by the 4-H Homemaking Club demonstrating what they had learned in their club and preparing and serving food to about seventy people. At Riverside's outstanding meeting the girls had charge of the program. They showed the bedspreads and dresser scarfs made in their club work and had a panel discussion on radio and television programs. The younger children put on a musical program. Rockalong especially liked their girls' program on club work, including a skit on color harmony and planning a wardrobe.

Islay-Zion's choice of the year's outstanding program wavered between the girls' homemaking club's program modelling skirts they had made and commenting on the material, and the Grandmothers' meeting conducted entirely by the grandmothers. At Hillcrest's "outstanding meeting" along with an address by the district president and a report of the district annual, the 4-H Homemaking Club girls put on a skit, demonstrated bias binding and exhibited bedspreads, dresser scarfs, chair pads and waste-paper baskets made in their club work. Manilla also selected two popular programs, one on Health showing how handi-