

Reserve it was a punishable offence to speak the Indian language on the playground.

Mr. Moses' final word to the girls was that there is no better "church work" a young person can do than to "take the hand of a boy or girl from another country and help them to understand the Canadian way of life."

Other guests who contributed to the enjoyment of the conference with their songs and their good company were the girls from the "British Young Farmers" party visiting Ontario. The girls were Margaret Lysbeth Jones of Wales, Anne Christie Elliott of England and Dorothy Anne Murray and Elizabeth Anne McKerrow of Scotland.

The College Contributes

The hospitality of the Ontario Agricultural College and Macdonald Institute staffs was one of the major contributions to the success of the conference.

In order to speak to the girls at their opening get-acquainted party, Dr. Margaret McCready, Principal of Macdonald Institute made special arrangements for catching her train to a Home Economics Conference. Dr. McCready expressed the hope that some of the girls attending the conference would some day be students at Macdonald Institute and she told of the interesting careers of graduates, some of whom had gone to work in far away parts of the world, and the equally important work of graduates who as wives of men working in isolated places were using their knowledge of home economics to the benefit of the community.

Mr. Elliott Moses gave a talk on "The Indian Canadian."

Miss Florence Eadie, Supervisor Junior Home Economics Extension who directed the programme.

Dr. C. D. Graham, Ontario Deputy Minister of Agriculture, speaker at the banquet.

Miss Helen McKercher, Director, Home Economics Service, who spoke on Careers for Girls.

Mr. J. A. Eccles, Director of the College Department of Public Relations brought greetings for the President, Dr. MacLachlan. Mr. Eccles explained that there are three colleges on the campus, the Ontario Agricultural College, the Ontario Veterinary College and Macdonald Institute, all under the University of Toronto which sets the standards for entrance. He advised the girls to consider a course at Macdonald Institute and to be aware that facilities are expanding so that by the time they are ready to enroll the college may be able to accommodate all applicants.

Mr. Eccles invited the girls to a bus tour of the campus and to a session of swimming in the pool in the new Physical Education Building. It happened that at the hour set for the swimming there came the heaviest downpour of rain of the season. This didn't stop the girls from going to the pool but the Director of Public Relations scored a strong point for his office by having a bus on hand to bring them back to the residence.

The girls were taken on a tour of Macdonald Institute with staff members in the
