

Mrs. Lymburner, President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, presents the President's Special Award for outstanding contributions to college life at the Federated Colleges to Miss Mary Lou Faris, a senior student at Macdonald Institute.

tried in some branches and Women's Institute members learned much from the original Canadians. Samples of Indian crafts brought as a demonstration were eagerly bought by Women's Institute members. The Women's Institute branches in the North West Territories, now known as the Northern Canada Women's Institutes, make a good topic for a Public Relations meeting in your branch. Material for this topic may be obtained from the Loan Library, Home Economics Service, 20 Spadina Road, Toronto 4.

"In 1967 Canada will observe her Centennial. This will be the occasion for many celebrations. We expect that Women's Institute members will take a big part in these celebrations; so, we should think ahead and make plans. There will be local pageants, parades and floats; historic sites may be preserved; persons who made a contribution to Canada's Hundred Years will be commemorated, etc., etc. Gather data from older members of the community on people and places; preserve clothing or articles which could be used to help make your branch's contribution to the Centennial a memorable event."

At this Board meeting it was decided that the responsibilities of the public relations officer should be shared with the secretary. From now on, records of donations will be kept by the secretary and she will report them to head office, leaving the P.R.O. free to attend to public relations and publicity.

Elizabeth Fry Society

Mrs. E. S. Brown's report of the Elizabeth Fry Society explained the purpose of the society — to assist and rehabilitate girls released from prison, to study the prevention of delinquency and to press for reforms in laws that recognize one standard for men and another for women. The society recommends that teachers in training should be taught more about mental health.

Furnishings For Adelaide Hoodless Homestead

In a progress report of the furnishing of the Adelaide Hoodless Homestead, Mrs. Haggerty gave a list of the articles still needed. These include: a piano of the period or a melodeon, a mahogany or rosewood centre table, a four-poster maple bed with rope "springs," a straw mattress, a dresser with shelves at the top, a washstand, bedroom china, a commode, 2 pairs of lace curtains, two brass curtain rings, pillow-slips with knitted lace edges, ladder-backed chairs, two hooked mats, glass dishes — two crystal, one amber, one blue, a moustache cup, a coal-oil lamp, a pin cushion, a log cabin quilt, a patchwork quilt, a blanket box, two mottoes "God is Our Refuge and Our Strength," and "Onward and Upward," a picture called "Little Daisy," a hall rack, a hanging lamp with ruby red glass, a crewel work drape, a rag carpet with underlay for the hall. Anyone wishing to contribute any of these articles should write to the Chairman of the Furnishings Committee, Mrs. H. C. Nixon, St. George, Ont., describing the article and finding whether it is still needed.

It was voted that the new F.W.I.O. President, Mrs. Trivers, represent the Ontario In-
