

She read and commented on excerpts about styles and customs of that time.

Onondaga "had an excellent display of old school books and pictures on view at the nearest museum during the summer."

Tara held "open house" when they had their Tweedsmuir history on display along with rugs, paintings, quilts, knitting, needlework, and hats of historic interest. The Institute served lunch and sold jams and baking at the meeting.

Bradley helped to plan a school reunion before their local school was closed and the pupils entered the central school.

Warton is assisting with plans to move the memorial cairn for the poet William Wilfred Campbell, from its present location on the Barbara Woods, winner of the Lambton County Ontario Women's Institute Scholarship for 1966. Barbara has completed fifteen 4H Homemaking Club projects, graduated from high school this summer and is now taking the Home Economics course at Macdonald Institute.

gave the Tweedsmuir History Committee some very good suggestions."

Bothwell's Corner reports that nine Institutes in the township, in cooperation with the Council, are publishing a centennial booklet to be sold in 1967.

North Derby assisted in preparing a history of the school to be read at the reunion at the school's closing. Bluewater prepared histories of the two one-room schools in the community and presented these to the museum.

Inman Road says: "We have a list of the 'century farms' in our township and are drawing a map of our local cemetery plots. We are also making a list of pioneer families on our various roads."

Ethel has a show case of antiques in the library. As the one-room schools in the district are closed, the Institute has photographs made to preserve in their Tweedsmuir history.

Elimville had good results from a roll call, "Bring your written farm history." The histories were given to the curator to be recorded in the Tweedsmuir history.

To Gain New Members

Five Lakes hopes to gain members by inviting non-members to take the training school projects and short courses.

Portlock Royal suggests asking non-members to give demonstrations of other parts of the program at Institute meetings. Laud advises sending a circular invitation to every woman in the township who might be interested in the Institute.

Princeton-Woodbury recommends calling on newcomers to the community, inviting them to meetings or courses and providing transportation if this is needed.

Whitechurch says: "Visit newcomers to the community and make them feel we need them. Give them copies of Home and Country. Ask every member to try to influence her neighbor to join."

Sharon Kennedy of Frontenac County, who has completed 10 4H Homemaking Club projects and will enter the Home Economics Course at Kemptville Agricultural School this fall. Sharon has represented her Club at the Ontario Girls' Conference and the Central Canada Exhibition and has been active in the young people's interests of her church and her community.

highway, which is being widened, to Blue Water Park.

Armow searched out the "century farms" in their area and sent the names to the provincial Junior Farmers' Association for their centennial project.

Winchester reports: "We visited Mrs. Lindsay of Kars where they have done good work on their Tweedsmuir history, and we got information from her on how to go about starting our book. Later Mrs. Lindsay came to us with a display of her Institute's Tweedsmuir history volumes. We now have our first volume started. The book was donated to us by our three 4-H Homemaking Clubs."

Sparta Sorosis entertained several groups of students and teachers interested in visiting the "Olde Forge and Anvil" as a historic building and local museum.

At Maxwell as in so many other places, the one-room school is being closed and the pupils transported to the township school. The Institute has photographs of the old and the new school for its Tweedsmuir history. Of course they will have the old school's history, too.

Annan says: "A roll call, 'Suggest an article you would like to see in the Tweedsmuir Book'