Adelaide Hoodless was determined that girls should learn "about Home Economics" back at the turn of the century. She was so concerned that she approached Sir Wm. Macdonald, tobacco millionaire, from Montreal to build a school for girls to learn about Domestic Science. When he objected by saying he could not favour Ontario over Quebec, the story has been told, Mrs. Hoodless simply said "build a school in both Guelph and St. Anne de Bellevue." This he did and so Macdonald Institute was established at O.A.C. in Guelph and Macdonald College at Ste. Anne. There probably isn't a Branch in this Province who hasn't had a project to raise money for worthy students. The range is wide. Members have supplied the grade VIII graduation dinner, local awards to a special student in the lower grades at secondary schools, and awards, bursaries and scholarships to students going on to higher education.

The Women's Institutes have encouraged education and many children and grandchildren have benefited.

INTERNATIONAL SCHOLARSHIP

Mrs. Wynnie Schumann, adviser to the South African Union of Homemakers Clubs, sends a progress report telling how F.W.I.O.'s donation is being used to support their activities. F.W.I.O. members will have an idea of the wide scope of their programme.

To date, "the Organiser of the SAUHC has attended leadership courses for our clubs in all the various centres in which we operate and so has begun to pinpoint the needs of each group and to participate in the very important follow-up work. (These courses are largely on Nutrition, in keeping with the A.C.W.W. resolutions.) The direct result has also been that during her systematically planned visits to Clubs she is handling programme guiding in an excellent manner. She seems to have a natural flair for bringing Clubs into contact with organizations which are able to assist them with talks and demonstrations, etc.

South African Union of Homemakers Clubs receive support from FWIO from International Scholarship Fund. They learn to make their own and their family's clothes, pattern designing and sewing techniques.
