Recycling Language

MOBIUS LOOP — the popularly adopted symbol for recycling used by many recycling groups and industries throughout North America. The symbol conveys the infinite use and re-use of materials that are recycled: solids, liquids and gases.

PHOTODEGRADABLE — can be decomposed by ultra violet rays.

FLY ASH — toxic material, usually containing heavy metals such as arsenic, barium, cadmium, lead and mercury. Produced during incineration of garbage. Must be stored in hazardous waste sites.

What is a volunteer?

At a meeting of a volunteer organization, there was heated discussion over who would be responsible for some 900 prize ribbons for the annual fair. The job had previously been done by a long standing member. Now the time had come for younger hands to get involved. No one volunteered.

Finally a member was nominated who promptly said, "I don't know if I would like it."

The woman who had done the job for so long replied, "You don't have to like it, just do it."

Everything that describes a volunteer was said in that short exchange.
