

Heavy lift

A huge crane arrived in Kincardine last Tuesday evening to lift the 60 tonne support beams for the new Huron Terrace bridge into place. Above, the first one is being dropped into place about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday. The work attracted a large crowd of sidewalk superintendents. (Eric Howald photo)

Pied Pipers

Members of the Kincardine Scottish lead people across the new, permanent foot bridge over the north branch of the Penetangore River. The bridge, part of the Kincardine Trails, was officially opened Saturday morning. (Eric Howald photo)
