A raging storm hit this area last Thursday night, with gale force winds blowing a blizzard of snow from the north east. The strong winds did considerable damage the full length of the Bruce Peninsula. Worst hit, was Tobermory. The people there were without hydro for some 36 hours leaving their homes dark and cold. The telephone poles were knocked down and the phones may not be in service for another week. The high winds caused huge seas to come barrelling in Colpoys Bay, breaking away any loose timbers and banks. Logs that were spewed up on the breakwater can be seen in the photo above.
