Mother Cat Hatches Ducklings

A few days ago, Jamie Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Thomas, found two duck eggs on the floor of the barn at the family farm just east of the village. Jamie placed the eggs in an unused bin in the chop box, empty except for a bit of hay in the bottom.

The eggs were forgotten until, a few days later, Jamie was surprised to hear the tender cheeping of ducklings emanating from the bin. Investigating, he found that an expectant mother cat, seeking a cozy, dry place to bring her youngsters into the world, had taken over the bin, which she now occupied with her four babes.

But the plaintive cries of ducklings still persisted, and Jamie dug into the covering of hay which had accumulated over the two duck eggs. There, to his amazement, he found, not the eggs, but two newborn ducklings, incubated by the warmth from the cat and her young family.

The young ducks were adopted by a mother duck with a family of four. All are doing well, but when The Advocate visited the Thomas farm Monday evening, mother duck and six babes had fled their pen in the face of a threat from a cat and taken up refuge under the barn.

Legge-Jacklin

Baskets of maroon chionille and white gladiolis decorated Holy Trinity Anglican church, Chesley, for the marriage of Ann Elizabeth Jacklin, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Jacklin, R.R.2 Elmwood, and Murray Gordon Legge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Legge, of R.R.2 Chesley.

The ceremony which took place on September 16, 1972 at 7 p. m. was officiated by Rev. S. Bell. Michael Charlton was organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of creamy crepe, in a Victorian style and a veil of cream, hand scalloped lace. She carried a basket of yellow rosebuds and mauve chrysanthemums.

Patricia Jacklin was maid of honour for her sister. Attendants were Jane Jacklin, sister of the bride and Sheryl Legge, sister of the groom. The girls wore full length gowns of maroon crepe. They carried baskets of yellow shasta daisies and white chrysanthemums.

The best man was John Legge, brother of the groom and guests were ushered by Doug Legge, brother of the groom, and Bruce Magwood, cousin of the bride.

The bride's mother received guests wearing a gown with an autumn coloured skirt and off white bodice. The groom's mother wore a long sleeved gown of flowered double knit.

Following the reception and late buffet at Elmwood Community Centre, the couple left for a honeymoon in Northern Ontario and upon returning will reside at R.R.2 Chesley.

Chesley gets bus service 1972

CHESLEY — Bruce Coach Lines of Tiverton will inaugurate a feeder bus service on March 1 from Paisley to Chesley to Hanover. The bus will connect with the Toronto-bound bus running from Southampton through Hanover.

The bus will be Chesley's first regular daily transportation service out of the town since the CNR railroad ceased passenger service in November, 1970.
