

William Standish took this land out from the Crown on January 2, 1877. In 1885 he sold to Robert Hutchinson for $2,165.00.

Andrew Hutchinson acquired this property through an estate, and in 1890 sold to Margaret Kettles.

In 1903 Charlie Nelson bought the land from Margaret Kettles. Charlie Nelson and his wife, Mary Cassidy raised their family here. They were - Teresa, Mrs. Heather Robertson; Marie, Mrs. Frank Anthes; Hilda, Mrs. Harold Sutherland; Gladys, Mrs. Albert Laycock; Howard, and Stewart, who died while quite young.

The cement bridge on the 2nd was built in 1905, the year Howard Nelson was born. In the Good Friday storm in 1913, the roof blew off the barn, one half landing on each side of the house.

In 1923 Charlie Nelson built the driving shed that still stands (1969).

In 1935 the house was remodelled, and in 1936 Howard Nelson, Charlie's son, married Florence Teasdale. He bought the farm from his father, and Mr. Nelson moved to Lot 20, Conc. 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Nelson had a family of two daughters and one son. Lucille, Mrs. Robt. Lawrie, was a school teacher; Sharon, Mrs. Allan MacDonald trained as a nurse; Orland taught school for some time, and at present is working for the Government in Saskatoon. His wife is the former Marlene Fitzsimmons.

In 1938 Howard Nelson built the cement silo, and put the water from the creek into the stable in the early '40's.

In 1946, Howard sold to David Jeffrey, who planned to use the farm as grass land, and he and his family moved to the sixth concession of Bruce Township.

In 1966 Charles W. and Florence Kelly purchased this 100 acres and 50 acres of Lot 22 from David Jeffrey for the sum of $15,000.00

An asphalt roof was put on the barn by Kellys in 1966, and in 1969 the barn was used for wintering cattle, for the first time since 1946.
