

Another
Centennial classic:

Contrast of dress and eras highlights Centennial Ball

June
1974

Our Centennial Queen

and her Ladies-in-Waiting

MRS. ELSIE WEBB

MRS. MEL BLACK

MRS. RUBY MCGILLIVRAY

(Times photo by John Norman)

Mrs. Marilyn McComb, Valerie and Bruce called on us Sunday evening and brought a copy of the song Marilyn composed for Grandma Black. As it is just one year on Wednesday since Grandma died - here's the tribute:

Are there violins in Heaven?

My grandma was a lady, and oh, how she could play
A tune on her violin, be it morning, night or day.
but now she's gone to Heaven, just a few short days ago,
And I know the first thing she'll ask them for is a fiddle and a bow.

Are there violins in Heaven?
Please give my grandma one.
She'll clap her hands, I can hear her say,

"Oh, music is such fun".
My grandma was in a nursing home for just about a year.

There were so very good to her, but the days were long and drear.

And now she's up in Heaven, up there with my grandpa and dad.
She'll play them a tune on that violin, and make them all so glad.

by Marilyn McComb
in memory of Frances Helen Black.

"we'll have these moments to remember"