

Early methods of grinding grain seem crude to the modern electrically powered machines which have taken over the work today. The above etching shows ten horses grinding grain into flour preparatory to winter storing.