

(photo L. Sproule)

The last mass ever to be held in the Lemieux church for the parish of St-Joseph de Lemieux took place last Sunday morning, Aug. 4. The church was full and although chairs were brought in, there were still people standing in the entrance of the church. Former parishioners came from Ottawa and Cornwall to be part of the last mass. The service was followed by a buffet lunch in one of the few remaining buildings in the town, the town's recreation centre. The last church service, and the end of virtually all activity in the town of Lemieux ironically coincides with the Lemieux's centennial year.

Alfred James Chesser - Margaret Ryan home in the 1800s.
Houses removed in 1991. Tree blew down in 1992