

Blind man ends Nfld. leg in big walk

PORT AUX BASQUES, Nfld. — Ken McColm, the blind man walking across Canada to raise money for diabetes research, has all but completed the Newfoundland stage of his journey.

Mr. McColm had been delayed by bad weather crossing the province and is about four days behind schedule.

He was making his way to Port aux Basques yesterday where he will take a ferry to North Sydney, N.S., over the weekend.

The Bathurst, N.B., man left St. John's on March 20. The walk has so far raised almost $13,000.

Mr. McColm lost his sight to diabetes two years ago. He hopes his walk, scheduled to end in Victoria at the beginning of December, will make Canadians more aware of the effects of the disease.
