

Holloway Nurse Aided In Heart Transplant

STANFORD, Calif. (Special) — A Belleville-area girl played a significant secondary role in the operation transplanting a heart into a dying steel worker here.

She is Dawn Cranston, 26-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Cranston, of Holloway.

Miss Cranston is the nurse-assistant to Dr. Norman E. Shumway, who carried out the transplant operation at Stanford University School of Medicine Saturday.

In her capacity, she assisted the doctor throughout the operation.

Miss Cranston graduated from Peterborough Civic Hospital nurses' school in 1962 and also worked in New Westminster before going to Stanford in 1964.
