

100-day school activities

On Feb. 24 when I was at Zorra Highland School to hear Alex Seaton portray the life of Sir John A. MacDonald, our neighbour Sheila (Armstrong) Marshall, a teacher at Zorra Highland, said "Jack you will have to come to my room we are celebrating 100 days since we started back to school last September."

Before I left for home, I did go to Sheila's room and her class were busy with the 100-day activities.

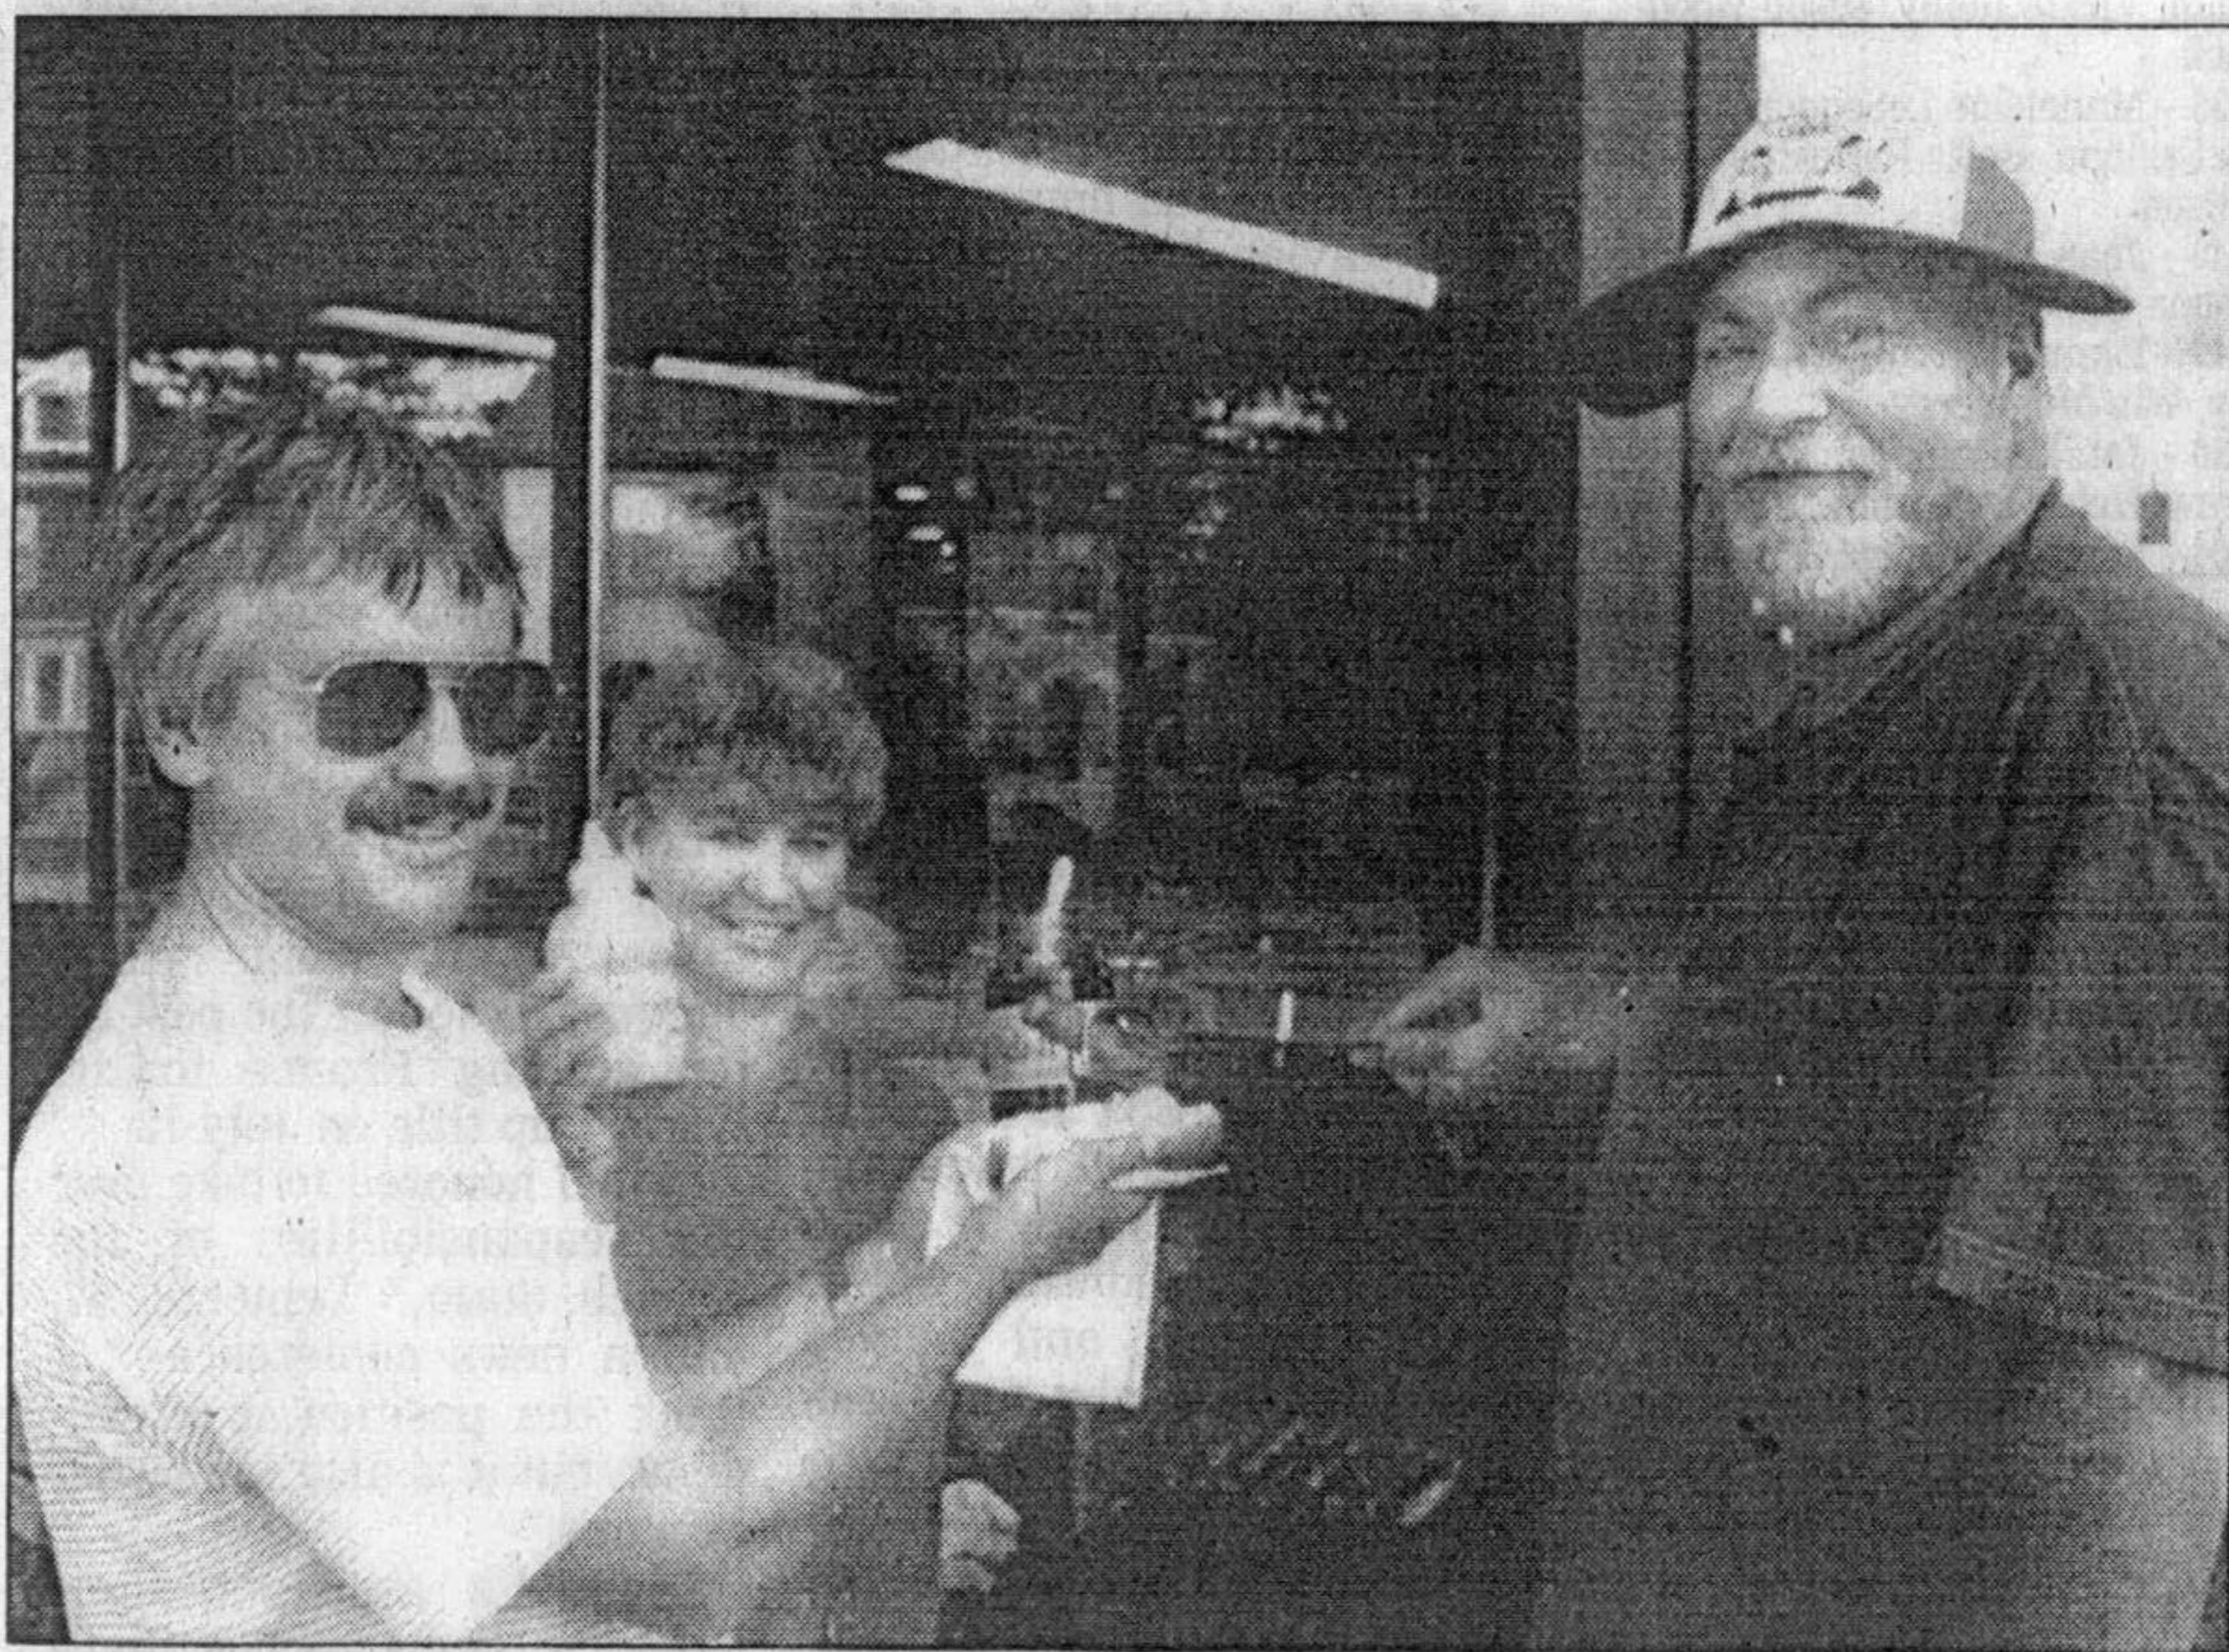

They were: make a name pattern, make a necklace, do a five-page 100-word story, roll the dice 100 times, pop the pop corn, build a 100 piece tower (measure how high), measure how long 100 things are, do a design with 100 blocks, put the objects in order, counting sheet, do a design use 100 stamp prints, find 100 words, and make a picture using 100 stars.

It was nice to visit your room Sheila and to take a picture of your class.

100 day activities at Zorra school

At Zorra Highland School, on the Embro Road, recently our neighbour in Avonton, Sheila (Armstrong) Marshall had her class for one day do a 100-day activities sheet to mark 100 days since September at school.

Al Morris, left, his wife Debbie and Charlie Tuyten get their act together as they offer hotdogs for sale outside Zehrs during a fundraiser for the Stratford Boehmers Midget Girls softball team Saturday. The Morrises daughter Melissa, 18, is a team member as is Leah Tuyten, 17, daughter of 'chef' Tuyten. Funds are being raised to send the team to National Championships scheduled for Aug. 8-16 in Alberta.
