

Sesqui-success!

Keith Haines was hard at work Saturday afternoon sawing logs the old-fashioned way. The logs were put to use by at least one other steam buff, Francis Hockley of Seagrave, for his 1922 steam engine once used at a saw mill in Lindsay.

The rotund faces of this charming calendar, distributed by Old Chum Tobacco in 1938, light up the walls of Scugog Memorial Library, where a collection of calendars owned by Bruce Mountjoy of Blackstock is currently on display.

Planting history

All of Scugog's political celebrities showed up to lend a hand at Cartwright's Bicentennial-Sesquicentennial celebrations Saturday afternoon, including Scugog councillor John Wolfers, Mayor Jerry Taylor, MP Allan Lawrence and MPP Ross Stevenson. Above, all four get into the act, planting a tree to commemorate the occasion.

Bruce Mountjoy's interest in calendars was piqued when he set eyes on "Mother's Darling" an Assinoboia calendar distributed by a harness maker named C.C. Stevens in 1905. About the little girl in the picture he says, "To me, they can't make a picture as good as that today. She looks to me like she's going to say something to me."
