GRAFTON — Declare the local area a disaster or provide some other financial aid to keep apple producers afloat.

That's the message eight apple growers brought to Northumberland MP Christine Stewart and Northumberland MPP Dr. Doug Galt at a special meeting Monday afternoon in Grafton.

With damage ranging from 80-to-100 per cent on apple orchards in Hope, Cramahe, Haldimand and Hamilton townships and none of the farmers covered by crop insurance, there is no money to pay pickers to take off the remaining apples this year and get next year's crop underway, members of the group told the politicians.

"We wanted to get both levels of government together...to know how serious the problems are," said Haldimand Township Reeve Bill Finley who organized the round-table in the township's municipal building.

Ron Knight of Redland Fruit Farms Limited in Haldimand Township says local apple growers have had to pay Agricorp to do assessments on the loss because the province hasn't done so.

"This is a disaster," he said.

"Why aren't we covered?"

He and other farmers likened the situation to the ice storm which ravaged Eastern Ontario and for which farmers received compensation.

This area has also been devastated by ice, although it is in the form of hail rather that freezing rain, but three weeks have gone by and no help is forthcoming.

MP Stewart said she would take their personal stories to the minister but she urged them to approach their growers association to act as a lobby group on their behalf.

She also noted that for the region to be declared a disaster area with relief provided, both the municipality and the province had to set the process in motion.

Jack Vanderwindt of Hope Township said while aid is being sought the cost of borrowing from the banks to keep operations going and to pay pickers is a hardship for all of the growers.

Dr. Galt said municipalities must get the process going by asking for aid and his assistant, John Boreham,

"We wanted to get both levels of government together...to know how serious the problems are."

said the agriculture ministry is awaiting assessments on the orchards before deciding what should be done next.

"Let us know what we have to do," Mr. Finley said. "(Because) local municipalities don't have the funds.

"There is one hope and that's the two (higher) levels of government."
