

Local News

Cramahe's tourism student has lots on the go

By BOB OWEN
lowen@xplornet.com

Cramahe Tourism's student employee, Christa Stanley has been a busy young woman this summer.

Since June 8 the Fleming College student has been applying her Travel and Tourism course knowledge under the tutelage of township Tourism Coordinator Rebecca Goddard.

The former ENSS graduate has been attending to a lot of the details involved in making the annual Trash 'n' Treasures event run smoothly. She's been designing and formatting ads for inclusion in local papers, and she's the creator of the poster that has popped up around town promoting the August 11 one-day event. Chances are the posters you've seen have been distributed by her too.

It's all part of taking the giant yard sale

PHOTO BY BOB OWEN

Castleton's Christa Stanley is applying her college education to her summer job in the Cramahe Township Tourism office.

up a notch.

Trash 'N Treasures hasn't used up all of her time.

Christa is busy collecting information about community organizations for the production of a pamphlet. She's finding out about the local murals to see if there is enough to produce a pamphlet to promote them too.

Sometime in the near future the tourism office is planning to provide a folder with general information about the community for new residents to the area. When it is done it will have important local phone numbers, places to go to get what you need, and the names of various organizations. Christa is doing some of the information gathering for that project.

For the first time the township is setting up a tour for visitors to the annual Labour Day weekend Auction Barn Jamboree. Participants will hop on a bus at the Keeler Centre and visit Hoselton's, KOKIMO Candles, and browse the Colborne downtown before heading back to the jamboree.

Rebecca and Christa are working on the details to make the tour happen.

And if all that isn't enough, she's helping with the township's fall tourism newsletter and learning how to make changes on the township web site.