Mental Health

MAN HAS LEARNED TO WORK NOW MUST LEARN TO PLAY

With increasing Use of Machinery Leisure Time Must Increase Problem is to Use it Healthfully

We all know the value, in the social order, of work, but do we as fully appreclate the value of play? This is a question which is being asked with increasing insistense by those interested in public health, both physical and mental. By "play" is meant, of course, recreation and all other sorts, of leisure-time occupation. With the use of machinery, less time than formerly is required to do a given piece of work. The first effect of this mechanization of industry has been somewhat unfortunate, however, it has resulted in the complete unemployment of large numbers of people, while ethers work almost, if not quite, as hard as before. This is but a temporary condition; in time we shall, no doubt, learn to make machinery the servant of all, rather than, as is now the case, the enemy of many.

Leading industrialists the world over already agree that hours of labor must shortly be reduced, and even that the number of working days in the week be also reduced. So there seems little doubt that, in one way or another, a great many people can count, in the very near future, upon a great amount of leisure time.

Fortunately this machine-age has brought with it facilities for leisuro time activities such as previous ages. never dreamed of Perhaps the foremost of these is the motor car; in more ways than one It is revolution tring our modes of fighter The movies. or talkton, play a larger part in ment. ota life than many coultre And them; House for this earlier II to yest free mouth to may what comet teathe will larve. morn the amplet ender of the fulness,
