

More than a new logo at ABTF this year

Written by Bob Owen

Thursday, 21 February 2013 22:59

The 25th annual Apple Blossom Tyme Festival will have more than a new logo this year. Under the enthusiastic leadership of Clinton Breau and with the hard work of a large committee, there are new events, new locations and new ideas to make your two days a lot of family fun.

Jennifer McGlennon has been out and about lining up sponsorships and already the festival hopes to have a banner flying across King Street. To encourage merchant participation, Jennifer will be providing them with window decorating starter kits.

Elaine Churchill has lined up face painters - more of them to accommodate the increased numbers of kids who line up for the face art. The artists will be set up in the north end of Victoria Square near the gazebo in the children's area.

Make sure you keep Saturday afternoon open for the Apple Blossom Tyme Festival Parade, complete with bands and floats and hopefully, lots of cyclists. The festival committee is asking people of all ages to decorate their bikes, strollers, wagons, doll carriages in the apple blossom theme and join in the parade.

Also new to the festival this year are the Rotary-run bathtub races and the Brewsters Burger Binge - for those who want to test their capacity at main course indulgence, rather than dessert.

Another new twist this year is the 50's and 6's family dance organized by Janice Johnston and being held at the Legion with dj Wild Willie.

You can keep up to date with festival plans by following the festival on Facebook. Angela Carr is filling the page with news. just click on Festival News and you can "follow" the page. Or watch Cramahe Now for details as they are released.

Last Updated on Thursday, 14 February 2013 23:21