

Art in the Park attracts many visitors

Veronique Kwakkernaat and Angie Otewill played flute and harp to a large crowd at the Mill Creek stage.

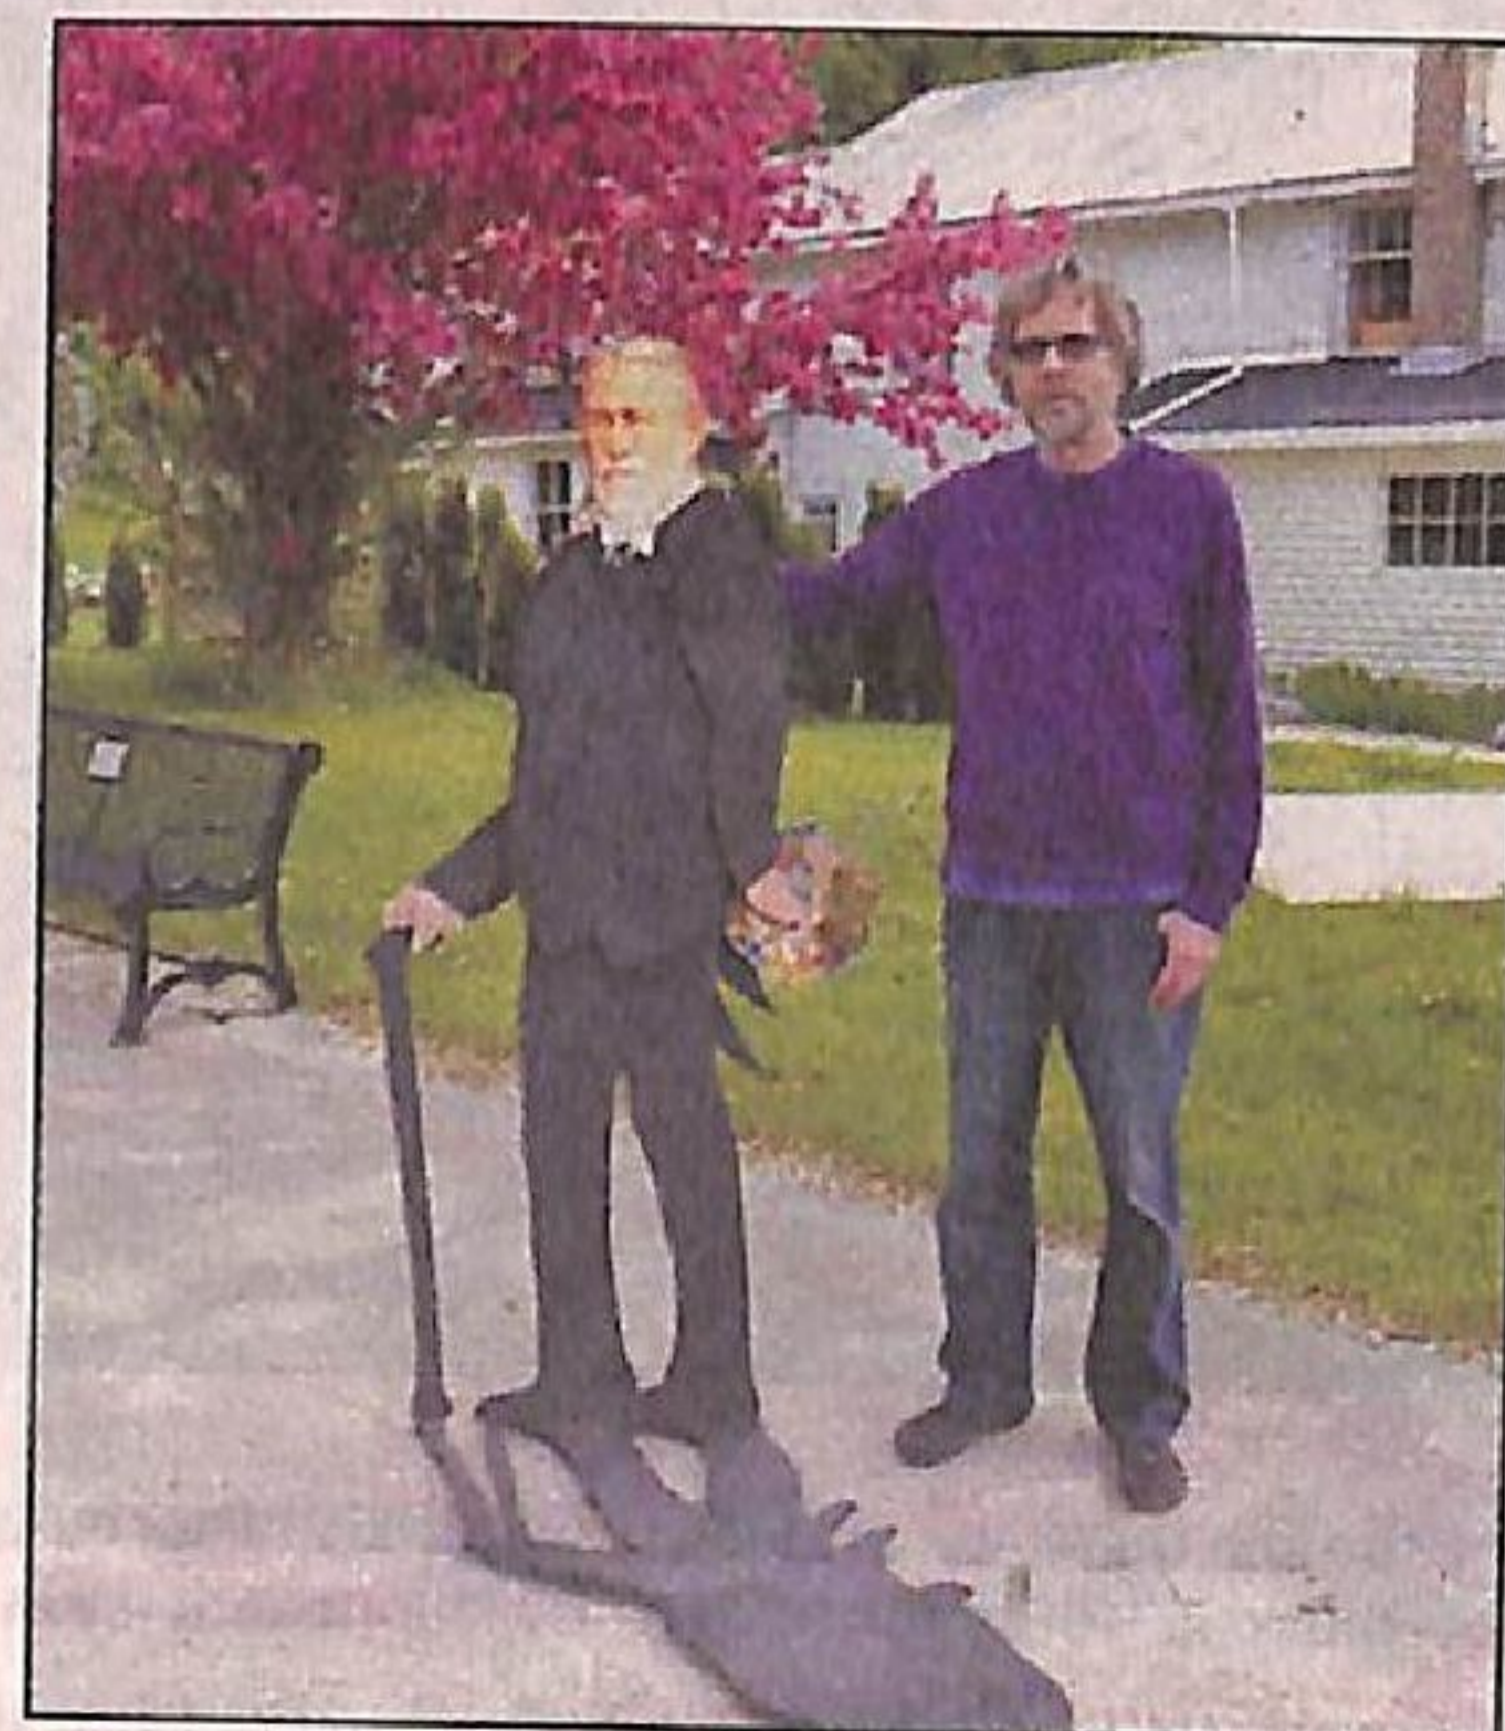

The Village of Warkworth hosted its third annual juried Art in The Park show and sale called at Mill Creek Park last weekend. There were artists from many different media who were invited to participate in the first class event which also featured musical performances, self-guided walking tours, food vendors and artists from all over Ontario showcasing and selling their work. More than 100 volunteers helped the Warkworth Business Association make the event a success.

John De Lang from Kilworthy, ON holds onto just one of the many hand-crafted carved birds he had on display during Warkworth Art in the Park last Saturday. De Lang has a long fascination of birds and enjoys wildfowl carving.

Charles Ciupa proudly displays his unique hand-crafted stained glass birds and bugs. A hobby for this Brighton resident has turned into a full time occupation.

Clive Russell on the right stands with his life-size replica of JD Kelly he made more than a year ago. Russell is an artist as well as researcher and a visual history into the life of JD Kelly. Kelly was a local artist who depicted important events into Canada's history.

Kate Hyde and Thomas Aitken from Warsaw hold up some of their handmade pottery. This is the third year they both have entered the Warkworth Art in the Park juried show. They have been working with each other since they both graduated from their Masters program in 1996.
