Centrepiece of maple syrup festival could have new owner
BRIGHAM INDEPENDENT JULY 25/13

By John Campbell

EMC News - Warkworth - The Sandy Flat Sugar Bush, the main attraction of the Warkworth Maple Syrup Festival held each spring, could have a new owner before the end of the year.

A sale has been negotiated but "it won't be definite until late fall," Alice Potter said this week.

She and her husband George purchased the 172-acre property five kilometres west of Warkworth in the 1970s and have served as hosts of the maple syrup festival since its inception 27 years ago.

She said the couple "definitely" will remain "still very much involved" in the production of maple syrup and the staging of the festival, even if the deal is completed as expected.

"The person who is very, very interested lives in Frankford ... [and] they want George and me to stay on and help them," Alice said. "They want to operate the same as we have."

The couple, Alice is in her 70s, George in his 80s, are happy they will continue to play a key role in what is a huge tourist attraction for the village and Trent Hills.

"George and I love the sugar bush; it's been part of our life for years and years but our health is telling us we should slow up a bit," Alice said. "But that's the only reason [for selling]. If we were younger, it wouldn't be for sale."
