

slices of bread and that is what her children ate for days at a time as it would take the man of the house at least four or more days to walk the fifty or sixty miles to Geavenhusid for more provisions.

I remember a lady telling me of when they settled in Brewswoth and her husband had to go this long distance for provisions and ^{she} ~~was~~ ^{was} he left alone for many days before he could return. When her baby arrived she was unable to nurse it and was unable to get milk. She took slices of bread, poured scalding water over it, then squeezed the water from the bread added a little sugar and fed it to her baby. The child lived on this for many weeks before the mother could obtain milk.

I am told that Mrs George Beaton was the first white
