

ADELAIDE HOODLESS (1857-1910)

On the eve of her fifty-second birthday, Mrs. Hoodless was scheduled to speak at a meeting of Women's Clubs in Massey Hall, Toronto. Half way through her speech she fell to the floor lifeless. She had given her comparatively short life for the betterment of home and country.