This past week, Ivan Wray passed on. It was a sudden blow for us all. We passed many hours chatting with him in the garage. He always had a story to tell or an opinion to express that was sometimes humorous, sometimes disparaging, but always interesting. We tended to watch for him to arrive, get the paper and stop in to let us know how he was feeling about the world, politics, human nature, sports, the weather and just life in general. We did with Ivan, what we do with most people, we took him for granted. He was part of the routine. Now we're sorry that we didn't take more time to really get to know him better. We'll miss him. But we're glad we had the chance to get to know him as well as we did, however, little that was in reality. Thanks, Ivan, for all you gave to us we hope that we gave something of worth to you in return. You now have the attentive ear of the highest authority, maybe he'll be able to act on your advice where mere mortals failed you. We certainly hope so. Goodbye, dear man, see you again.
