The Summer of 1951 was so full of happy experiences. It was, more than ever, a summer of reunions. Old friends who had not come home for years came this year. They seemed so glad to come. Rather more than usual our own people seemed to throw off the cares of business and try to gather sweets while the clover bloomed. There are several delightful weeks in store for us yet but they are weeks of short days, bright evening fires and crimson leaves. Let us hope we can all look back upon the summer conscious we have lost no opportunities.
