Women's Institute celebrates sixty years of helping the needy

The Sunnydale Home for Children, Toronto's Sick Children's Hospital and the Red Cross have been among the many organizations helped by the Sunderland Women's Institute over the past sixty years.

Over these years, hospitals have been given life-saving equipment, scholarships have provided education, and the poor have been fed and clothed. And through their generosity and hard-work, many people in the Sunderland area and all over the world have been helped by these women.

The Sunderland Women's Institute celebrated its sixtieth anniversary last week at the town hall with a tea. The meeting was attended by original charter member Iva Jewell, who joined in 1927.
