

Anne McWade Honoured

Retires after 33 years at Scotia bank

After 33 years of dedicated service at the Bank of Nova Scotia in Cobden, Miss Anne McWade has retired.

Over the years there have been many changes in the bank to both staff and routine. When Miss McWade started at the bank August 30, 1950, there was a staff of five, that number has now doubled, the teller was in a locked wire cage and accounts were kept in hand-written ledgers where entries were made with a straight pen. The routine changed from hand-written ledgers to machine posting in 1953 and then to computer terminals in 1976.

During the 33 years of service the bank was held-up three times.

Miss McWade worked with six managers over the years, namely Messrs. McCallum, Thompson, Deighton, White, Mains and Welsh.

Miss McWade retired June 1 and enjoys traveling, knitting, reading and spending her time outdoors riding her tri-moto.

A staff dinner was held in June for Miss McWade and she was presented with her horoscope charm. This week she was presented with a French-style telephone in honour of her retirement.

During her years of service, Miss McWade made many friends among her co-workers and customers. She is wished many years of happy retirement by these people.
