Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white broadened tulle with long lace-trimmed sleeves and a sweet-pea-veiled hair. She carried red roses and white gladioli.

Glenys Anstiss, twin sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, in mauve tulle with matching hair. She carried mauve and white gladioli. Irene Letton, niece of the groom, was junior bridesmaid, and wore a similar style dress in rose tulle and carried a bouquet of white gladioli. Edward Guppy was best man.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace. The bridesmaid received a necklace from the bride and the junior bridesmaid a silver pocket.

To receive, the bride's mother wore red, accepted in gray. The groom's mother wore turquoise blue with navy accessories.

The bride's home, where the reception was held, was also decorated with pink and white gladioli. After the reception the happy couple left for a honeymoon in Niagara by car, the bride travelling in a moss green dressmaker suit with navy accessories. On their return they will reside in Clute.
