

gold just like a bit of sunshine then the cows would hurry to see if an apple had fallen of a wild apple tree. then a little hollow in the ground that I called cupid's bow, the soft maples & oaks were just grand to look at, the largest oak leaves I ever saw, next was lover's lane the trees so tall & dense it was quite dim even if the sun was shining. then up a hill the cows would stop & rest so would I at the top one could look out and see such beauty as no artist could paint. on the other side of road was an Indian camping ground years ago. a good place as you can see a long way every direction and water near. then down a grade & out in the open there I sat down on a big flat pine stump while cows & dog got their drink. on this walk one could see such a lot of wild life, many different kind of birds red black gray squirrels, wood chuck's. skunk's digging out grubs, partridges. pheasants, one came flying so near
