

of the inhabitants of Castleton take their business needs (groceries) to the major centres (Cobourg, Campbellford) because these areas have all the major business demands, which Castleton does not have, and the quantity and quality of the product demand.

was

Castleton, originally called Centre-ville but was changed because of the extensive use of the name centre to begin the names of communities, and was changed to the name Castleton. The exact date of settlement is unknown because of people moving in gradually inhabiting the area and people moving out unable to cope with the pioneer life. The first building a grist mill erected by Joseph Keeler in 1806 who also founded Colborne in 1794, Lakeport and Grafton area. Once Castleton got

Purdy's Mill 1968
Audrey Jones, photographer