

early childhood education, before attending teachers college.

Although she loves working with animals and wanted to become a veterinarian, she said her mathematics skills likely aren't good enough to handle university-level science subjects.

Carolyn, a Grade 13 student at West Hill Secondary School, said the Grey County high school teachers strike influenced her decision to seek the dairy princess title again.

She said the job will help keep her busy writing speeches, studying related topics and visiting elementary schools while she's not going to school, although she's already doing all the independent studying she can at home.