

Lending a helping hand

Ed Heal of The Free Press

Queen Elizabeth, about to receive another gift of flowers during a walkabout at Nathan Phillips Square in Toronto, turned to pass a bouquet to an aide Tuesday. She looked this way and that, but no aide was at hand. So Prince Philip stepped into the breach, took the bouquet from the queen and quickly passed it on when an assistant appeared at his side. Accompanying the royal couple were Toronto Mayor Art Eggleton and his wife, Brenda.
